U.S. AT WAR CRISIS, SAYS WILSON

GERMANS START DOUBLE DRIVE

BIG BATTLE NORTH OF RHEIMS

Huns Attack on the Aisne Front; Also Near Locre in Flanders

By International News Service.

London, May 27.—Preceded by a bombardment of the utmost violence, the Germans this morning began strong attacks over a wide front between Rheims and Soissons, and in the sector of Locre and Vooremezeele, the War Office announced today.

The War Office said that the new attacks were made against the French and British holding the line in the two zones of combat. There was strong activity by German artillery against the British front all day Sunday.

Today's report by the French War Office says a great battle is in progress north of the Aisne River and north of Rheims, following the delivery of German attacks over a wide front between Rheims and the Pinon forest.

During the latter part of the night, after a bombardment of extreme intensity, the Germans delivered assaults between those two points, the Paris communique says. The French and British are resisting with their usual valor. The battle is progressing.

VIOLENT BOMBARDMENT.

The text of the Paris communique follows:

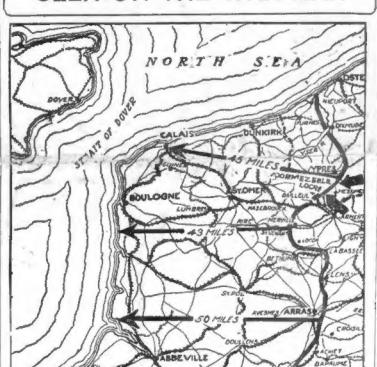
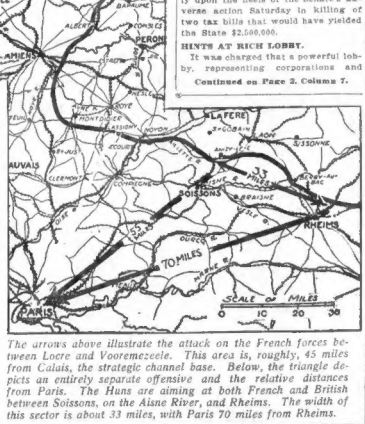
London, May 27.—Germany has made no reply to the British proposals for an exchange of prisoners.

NEW GERMAN ASSAULTS SEEN ON THE WAR MAP





The arrows above illustrate the attack on the French forces between Locre and Vooremezeele. This area is, roughly, 45 miles from Calais, the strategic channel base. Below, the triangle depicts an entirely separate offensive and the relative distances from Paris. The Huns are aiming at both French and British between Soissons, on the Aisne River, and Rheims. The width of this sector is about 33 miles, with Paris 70 miles from Rheims.

Bombing of Paris by Long-Range Guns Begins Anew

By International News Service.

London, May 27.—The long-range bombardment of Paris with German long-range cannon was resumed at 6:21 o'clock this morning.

The bombardment was discontinued about a fortnight ago when it was announced that French artillery had put the long-range German cannon out of commission. The German guns then were on the edge of the Forest of St. Gobain, about sixty-five or seventy miles northeast of Paris.

ESTATE OF SPRING RICE VALUED AT $136,000

London, May 27.—The estate of the late Sir Cecil Spring Rice, formerly British Ambassador to the United States, was valued at 27,254 pounds ($136,000) it was disclosed today.

In honor of the brave men of the Grand Army of the Republic, our heroes of '61, the Boston AMERICAN will publish a great Patriotic Edition, in colors, next Thursday, Memorial Day. While the youth of the nation is battling abroad to help save the world from the plague of the Hun the anniversary approaches which is sacred to those who preserved the nation itself. The Patriotic Edition of the Boston AMERICAN on Memorial Day will be published as tribute to the wearers of the Union Blue, whose heroism and sacrifice shall never be forgotten.

Super-Submarine Is Sunk by a Single Torpedo

By International News Service.

London, May 27.—The German super-submarine sunk in the latitude of St. Vincent (Cape Verde Islands) was destroyed by a single torpedo from a submerged British submarine, said Archibald Hurd, naval critic of the Telegraph, writing in that paper today. The scene of the British submarine's victory was 2,000 miles from Plymouth.

Mr. Hurd's article showed that British submarines were now cruising long distances from England.

M'CALL IS FIRM FOR TAX BILLS

Insists on Action by Legislature Before Adjournment Is Taken

Disappointed, if not disgusted, by the action of the Senate in killing meritorious taxation legislation, Governor McCall today sent in a special message declaring he would not allow the Legislature to adjourn until it had increased the rate of the income tax on intangible personal property.

The special message followed closely upon the heels of the Senate's adverse action Saturday in killing of two tax bills that would have yielded the State $2,500,000.

RAILROAD FARES UP JUNE 10

Three-Cent Passenger Rate Ordered by McAdoo; Freight Also Advanced

By International News Service.

Washington, May 27.—Increases in passenger fares to three cents per mile, effective June 10, and general freight rate increases of approximately 25 per cent., effective June 25, as approved by President Wilson, were today ordered by William G. McAdoo, director-general of railroads.

More than $850,000,000, the increased operating expenses for 1918, are expected to be raised by these increases in rates, according to the United States railroad administration. One hundred and ninety-six railroads and all steamships in lake and coastwise trade under federal control are affected.

These sweeping changes in rates were announced today following the granting to railroad employes of the largest wage increase recorded, amounting to $200,000,000 yearly.

Wage increases plus $160,000,000 additional cost of coal this year and the high price of other railroad materials make higher passenger and freight rates necessary, said McAdoo, in passenger rates he announced these changes:

The basis of fare for one way travel in day coaches will be three cents a mile, with a few exceptions in sparsely settled regions, where the existing higher rate will remain.

Round trip tourist fares, somewhat higher than those now in effect, will be established to take effect June 15.

SENATE TO HARMONIZE AIRCRAFT INQUIRY

Washington, May 27.—The Senate Military Affairs sub-committee met today to proceed at once with its inquiry into the aircraft situation. Senator Thomas of Colorado announced that the committee would work in harmony with Charles Evans Hughes' investigation. The committee will make a tour of inspection of the various aircraft factories of the country, beginning late this week. Upon its return it will open hearings and call many witnesses. It is the intention of the committee to have the hearings public as far as possible.

CUBA-MEXICO BREAK LITTLE AFFECTS U. S.

Washington, May 27.—Formal notification of the withdrawal of Mexico's diplomatic representative from Cuba was received at the Mexican embassy today from E. Garza Perez, assistant secretary of foreign relations for Mexico. The advice differed in no material particular from those previously received, and there were no developments in the situation. The feeling here is that the step little affects the United States.

Text of President Wilson's Address to Congress

Washington, May 27.—President Wilson, in his address to Congress today, said:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

It is with unaffected reluctance that I come to ask you to prolong your session long enough to provide more adequate resources for the treasury for the conduct of the war. I have reason to appreciate as fully as you do how arduous this session has been. Your labors have been severe and protracted. You have passed a long series of measures which required the debate of many doubtful questions of judgment and many exceedingly difficult questions of principle as well as of practice.

MUST DO FULL DUTY.

The Summer is upon us in which labor and counsel are twice as arduous and are constantly apt to be impaired by lassitude and fatigue. The elections are at hand and we ought as soon as possible to go and render an intimate account of our trusteeship to the people who delegated us to act for them in the weighty and anxious matters that crowd upon us in these days of critical choice and action. But we dare not go to the elections until we have done our duty to the full.

These are days when duty stands stark and naked, and even with closed eyes we know it is there. Excuses are unavailing. We have either done our duty or we have not. The fact will be as gross and plain as the duty itself. In such a case, lassitude and fatigue seem negligible enough. The facts are tonic and suffice to freshen the labor.

And the facts are these: Additional revenues must manifestly be provided for. It would be a most unsound policy to raise too large a proportion of them by loan, and it is evident that the four billions now provided for by taxation will not of themselves sustain the greatly enlarged budget to which we must imme[illegible] and.

We cannot in fairness wait until the end of the fiscal year is at hand to apprise our people of the taxes they must pay on their earnings of the present calendar year, whose accountings and expenditures will then be closed.

We cannot get increased taxes unless the country knows what they are to be and practices the necessary economy to make them available. Definiteness, early definiteness, as to what its tasks are to be is absolutely necessary for the successful administration of the treasury. It cannot frame fair and workable regulations in haste, and it must frame its regulations in haste if it is not to know its exact task until the very eve of its performance.

INEQUITIES IN TAX LAW.

The present tax laws are marred, moreover, by inequities which ought to be remedied. Indisputable facts, every one; and we can not alter or blind them. To state them is argument enough.

And yet perhaps you will permit me to dwell for a moment on the stimulation of industry of almost every sort produce inflations and extravagances which present-

PRESIDENT ADDRESSES CONGRESS

Urges Passage of Revenue Bill at This Session as Aid to Winning the War

By International News Service.

Washington, May 27.—"We are not only in the midst of the war, we are at the very peak and crisis of it," declared President Wilson to a joint session of Congress today in demanding immediate action on a new war tax bill.

Paying his tribute to the military forces of the nation, the President insisted that the Congress "must forget politics" and prepare an adequate financial program that the economic situation shall be as sound as is the military.

His entire address was a plea for definiteness in a taxation program and correction of inequalities which exist in the present law. No other subject but taxation was touched on in the message.

VISIT UNEXPECTED.

As usual there was very little preliminary announcement of the intention of the Executive to address Congress. In consequence the galleries were hardly as crowded as usual and the visitors were mostly wives and relatives of senators and representatives.

When the President reached the capitol he was escorted to the office of Speaker Clark and later to the rostrum by a joint committee of the Senate and House made up of the majority and minority leaders and members of the finance committee.

READY TO MEET LEVIES.

Although the majority of the members frankly admitted that they had been opposed to the demanded legislation and saw no reason why it could not be postponed until the short session in December, or at least to a special session to be called in October, all agreed that the demands of the President would be met.

The position of the business inter-

RED CROSS DRIVE ENDS TONIGHT; LAST CALL!

Last chance to pile up that oversubscription in the nation-wide $100,000,000 Red Cross drive.

Total subscriptions so far recorded amount to $112,097,304.

The drive ends at midnight tonight. The Red Cross officers are sweeping into the financial stretch for a "Garrison finish."

Irrepressible Nantucket, which bids fair to lead the country for local oversubscription, reported today a round $7,500 subscribed on a quota of only $1,500. That means 500 per cent of its quota. The Nantucketers were still going at last accounts.

The great slogan for the final day of the drive was "Double your subscription."

Asked for $7,000,000 the five New England States report collections in hand amounting to $8,227,000.

It will surprise nobody at Red Cross headquarters if ultimately the New England total reaches $9,000,000.

HIT RED CROSS BOX IN HAND OF A GIRL

Two hundred workmen employed at the Bertelsen & Petersen engineering works in Border street, East Boston, threatened to strike today unless Peter Shellmer of Eutaw street, East Boston, was discharged.

On Saturday afternoon he is charged with having knocked out of the hands of Margaret Wallace, eleven, of No. 250 East Saratoga street, a Red Cross box she was holding at the gates to receive contributions from the men when they were leaving work.

When Shellmer appeared at the plant this morning the other men told the foreman they would not work with him. Shellmer was told to stay out this morning and meet his superintendent.

Shellmer appealed to Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Kirby of No. 19 Benningstreet, Red Cross workers, to get him right with his fellow workmen. He claims it was all an accident.

Several of the men who witnessed the act, however, say Shellmer has not been acting in a very patriotic way of late. They say that when the rest of the men willingly gave a day's pay to the Red Cross he demurred and finally contributed only a part of his wages. They also charge him with having taken an unpatriotic attitude in the purchase of Liberty bonds.

The other men at the plant said that unless Shellmer presents at the conference with the management a satisfactory explanation as to where he stands in this war they will refuse to work with him and ask that the Federal authorities give him their attention.

U. S. TROOPS IN THE LINE.

American troops are holding part of the line on the Woevre Plain and in the vicinity of Apremont. Recently the Americans engaged in a hot combat with the Germans around Apremont.

The text of the British official statement follows:

"Strong hostile attacks, preceded by a bombardment of great intensity, developed early this morning on wide fronts against the British and French between Rheims and Soissons and against the French between Locre and Voormezeele.

"There was considerable hostile artillery firing yesterday and last night against British positions.

"This official announcement by the British War Office contained the first intimation that British troops were fighting with the French between Rheims and Soissons.

Rheims lies in the western part of the Champagne district, seventy miles northeast of Paris. Soissons lies on the Aisne River front about thirty-three miles northwest of Rheims.

Locre and Voormezeele are both on the Flanders front, in Belgium, near the Franco-Belgian frontier. Locre was recaptured from the Germans by the French recently.

Foch Was Prepared 'Against Any Surprise on Part of the Germans

By FRANK CHARLTON,
International News Service Cable Editor.

The Germans have broken loose again on the western battle front.

After a lull of a month in big scale infantry operations, they suddenly the war, when Paris was saved and switched their offensive operations to the German border of Von Kluck the allied battle line lying between the Aisne River and the Rheims, assaulting British and French positions vigorously on a wide front.

At the same time a German blow fell on the northern front (Flanders battle zone) and the French positions in the Locre-Voormezeele sector became the scene of heavy German assaults.

The attacks in both theatres of combat began at dawn today and were preceded by bombardments of the utmost intensity.

ATTACK ALONG AISNE.

The German drive between Rheims and Soissons was launched along the Aisne River front, a district that has long been comparatively quiet.

This front is about 23 miles wide, while that between Locre and Voormezeele is approximately five miles in width.

The Hun command evidently hoped to take the French by surprise by striking at positions many miles from the Picardy and Flanders battlefields, but there is every evidence that he failed to do so. The presence of British troops in that sector (which was revealed today by the British War Office for the first time) showed that General Foch, the allied generalissimo, had anticipated a German effort there and had moved British reinforcements southward to help the French meet it.

CLOSE TO PARIS.

The German line between Rheims and Soissons lies nearer to Paris than at any other point with the exception of their front in the Noyon-Montdidier sector—on the southern flank of the Picardy salient.

Rheims is 70 miles northeast of Paris. Soissons, which lines upon the Aisne river is about 55 miles from Paris. The German front in that region bends northwest from a point north of Rheims, crossing the Aisne river at Berry-au-Bac. Then it swings in a northwesterly direction past the heights of the Aisne (Chemin Des Dames sector) passing Soissons some distance to the north.

The Rheims-Soissons theatre lies some twenty to thirty miles north of the Marne River, where the Germans received their first decisive defeat of were sent rolling back to positions on the Aisne.

FRENCH BEAR BRUNT.

The French have been compelled to bear the brunt of the new German pressure on the Flanders front. They hold Locre, which was one of the points of attack, while their positions in the sector of Voormezeele were also under assault.

Both of these Belgian villages lie in the hill district southwest of Ypres, not far from the Franco-Belgian frontier.

In connection with the new blows by the Germans on the western front, it is now reported from a Swiss source that the Austro-Hungarians and Germans are about to begin an offensive of the first magnitude against the Italians.

...ly make the whole economic structure questionable and insecure, and the very basis of credit is cut away. Only fair, equitably distributed taxation, of the widest incidence and drawing chiefly from the sources which would be likely to demoralize credit, by their very abundance, can prevent inflation and keep our industrial system free of speculation and waste. We shall naturally turn therefore, I suppose, to war profits and incomes and luxuries for the additional taxes.

QUOTES PROVERB OF MILLSTREAM

But the war profits and incomes upon which the increased taxes will be levied will be the profits and incomes of the calendar year 1918. It would be manifestly unfair to wait until the early months of 1919 to say what they are to be. It might be difficult, I should imagine, to run the mill with water that had already gone over the wheel.

Moreover, taxes of that sort will not be paid until the June of next year, and the treasury must anticipate them. It must use the money they are to produce before it is due. It must sell short-time certificates of indebtedness.

In the Autumn a much larger sale of long-time bonds must be effected than has yet been attempted. What are the bankers to think of the certificates if they do not certainly know where the money is to come from which is to take them up?

MUST INSPIRE CONFIDENCE

And how are investors to approach the purchase of bonds with any sort of confidence or knowledge of their own affairs if they don't know what taxes they are to pay and what economies and adjustments of their business they must effect?

I cannot assure the country of a successful administration of the treasury in 1918 if the question of further taxation is to be left undecided until 1919.

The consideration that dominates every other now and makes every other seem trivial and negligible is the winning of the war. We are not only in the midst of the war, we are at the very peak and crisis of it.

Hundreds of thousands of our men, carrying our hearts with them and our fortunes, are in the field, and ships are crowding faster and faster to the ports of France and England with regiment after regiment, thousand after thousand, to join with them until the enemy shall be beaten and brought to a reckoning with mankind.

There can be no pause or intermission. The great enterprise must, on the contrary, be pushed with greater and greater energy. The volume of our might must steadily and rapidly be augmented until there can be no question of resisting it.

MONEY MUST SUSTAIN EFFORT.

If that is to be accomplished, gentlemen, money must sustain it to the utmost. Our financial program must no more be left in doubt or suffered to lag than our ordnance program, or our ship program, or our munitions program, or our program for making millions of men ready. These others are not programs; indeed, but mere plans upon paper, unless there is to be an unquestionable supply of money.

That is the situation, and it is the situation which creates the duty, no choice preference of ours. There is only one way to meet that duty. We must meet it without selfishness or fear of consequences. Politics is adjourned. The elections will go to those who think least of it; to those who go to the constituencies without explanations or excuses, with a plain record of duty faithfully and disinterestedly performed.

I, for one, am always confident that the people of this country will give a just verdict upon the service of the men who act for them when the facts are such that no man can disguise or conceal them.

MONTH FOR FLIRTING; THOUGHT HER FRIEND

"I thought she was a friend of my sister." That was Morris Hineiman's explanation in East Boston court today to a charge of having accosted a woman at the Marginal street terminal of the narrow gauge railroad. Judge Barnes gave him a month in the House of Correction. On appeal Hineiman as held in $300. Patrolman Thomas McNulty said the woman complained to him and he caught Hineiman after a sprint.

STRONG BOND NOW BINDS U. S. AND CANADA

"There is a bond now between Canada and the United States which can never be broken," said Major Kenneth D. Marlatt, head of the British Canadian Recruiting Mission, just returned from Canada.

"Canadian army men told me they had never seen a finer lot of soldiers than those sent from the Boston Recruiting Mission. They are hoping that thousands more can be sent from New England. The Stars and Stripes are everywhere floating side by side with the Canadian flag in Canada."

2 MONTHS' SENTENCE FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

A sentence of two months in the House of Correction for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and a fine for intoxication were promised by Judge Burke in East Boston court today to Lester R. York of No. 64 White street, East Boston. York said he would appeal, so sentence was deferred until Friday to give him a chance to arrange for bail. Patrolman Thomas Walsh testified that York was driving car zig-zag fashion in a line of vehicles at the East Boston approach to the North Ferry.

McCALL DEMANDS INCOME TAX REFORM

State Street lobby interests, had a hand in the killing.

One of the bills defeated by the Senate was the income tax measure which Governor McCall today declared must be passed before he would permit the Senate to end its session.

The State tax this year will be $15,000,000, the highest in history. Last year it was $11,000,000. Governor McCall pointed out in his message that the big corporation interests and rich citizens will escape their just share, and the increased burdens will fall upon the small home owner, the farmer and the tenant unless the Senate acts fairly in the matter. Governor McCall said in his message:

GOV. McCALL'S PROTEST.

On April 26, by special message, I called the attention of the General Court to the need of providing revenues for the State on account of the increased expenses growing out of the war.

"The income tax, so-called, was devised before the country entered the war, and the effect of it is to relieve intangible personal property entirely from sharing in the increases of expenses that are put upon the Commonwealth by reason of the war.

In the event that legislation is not passed requiring an additional tax to be levied upon intangible personal property, the burden of this increase must be wholly borne by real estate.

It seems to me very unjust to put all of this burden upon the home builder, the farmer, and the other people who own real estate.

I strongly recommend that provision be made so that during the current year, at least, the State may participate to some extent in the proceeds of taxation upon intangible personal property to meet war expenditures.

The tax levied in a proposed bill requires only about one-half of 1 per cent of income, which is almost negligible so far as the individual taxpayer is concerned, but in the aggregate is of great importance to the Commonwealth.

I believe that it would be unwise to prorogue the Legislature, not to meet again until next year, unless a substantial increase in revenue were first provided.

CLEMENCEAU RETURNS FROM VISIT TO FOCH

Paris, May 27.—Premier Clemenceau returned from the front last night after having consulted with General Foch, the allied generalissimo.

McADOO WINS IN REVENUE DISPUTE

...ests, it now is possible to divulge, is that they are willing, even anxious, to pay their share of the government's expense, but they believe that they should be given all of the time possible to do so. They have made it very plain that a new tax bill, scientifically prepared, and passed between now and next Fall, will enable them to set their financial houses in order so that they can subscribe to Liberty Bonds and meet all tax levies without being subjected to financial disturbance which might cause serious trouble.

The arguments of these business leaders, presented to the President through Secretary McAdoo, carried the day, and the President decided to do all in his power to get immediate action on revenue. In order to start the ball rolling promptly he asked for and secured the joint session for today to make his views plain.

Congressional leaders accepted the action of the President without protest, and announced that they would push the new revenue measure through without any more delay than such a bill required. It was not thought possible, however, that the new revenue legislation would be complete much before the time fixed for the convening of the regular short session next December.

The present session, it was accepted, will likely overlap, although it was possible that the members might be able to get a couple of weeks in which to go home if no unexpected obstacles were encountered.

Explaining the President's action, an administration official today said:

"He gave General Pershing a free hand in France. The latter is getting everything he believes necessary to win the war. The President considers the financial situation fully as important as the military. Secretary McAdoo says this revenue bill must be passed because of the extraordinary expenses resulting from the war. And the President believes that Mr. McAdoo is entitled to the same support that he is giving General Pershing."

3 ALIENISTS DECLARE GRACE LUSK WAS INSANE WHEN SHE SLEW

JUDGE SCOUTS ANY THEORY OF ABERRATION IN TRIAL OF WISCONSIN TEACHER

By International News Service.

Waukesha, Wis., May 27.—Three alienists testified today that they believed Miss Grace Lusk was insane at the time she shot Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts; that it was hereditary insanity and brought to the surface suddenly by the fierce verbal attack made by Mrs. Roberts.

On the other hand, Judge Martin Loeck gave his opinion that Miss Lusk is not insane, nor ever was. Judge Loeck made the statement when the State moved that a commission be appointed to determine whether or not Miss Lusk is insane at the present time.

"If she is insane we have no right to try her," declared Prosecutor Corrigan.

Judge Loeck overruled the motions and said:

"I don't think the defendant is insane now. And while the jury is out I don't ming saying that I am not convinced she ever was insane."

How Much Infidelity Should Wife Endure? Asks Beatrice Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Waukesha, Wis., May 27.—The revelations of the Lusk trial at Waukesha led one to ask how much should a wife endure in the way of infidelity?

Is constant forgiveness on the part of the wife an error that reacts chiefly against the sinning husband? To what extent are a man's moral standards lowered by the constant condoning of infidelity on the part of his wife?

And does not the knowledge that his own fireside will be swept and garnished and a welcome be awaiting him, lead him on to victimize one woman after another?

Nothing more astonishing has cropped up during the course of this amazing trial than an instance divulged by Miss Lusk on the witness stand during her testimony.

GIRL DIED IN ATTIC.

The questions and answers had turned on the case of a girl who, after having been too friendly with Dr. Roberts, died—miscarrying in an attic.

The late Mrs. Roberts is alleged to have recalled the case of this girl to Miss Lusk, in the way of a warning, and to have told her that her own end would be worse.

"The woman now on trial for her life inquired of Dr. Roberts' wife, 'and you went in church with him the Sunday after that girl was buried?'

And Mrs. Roberts is accredited with saying, 'certainly. I am a respectable married woman.'

It seems to me that it would take a great deal of respectability, more than exists in the world, to make such tolerance right and justifiable.

For too many years has the world condoned men of the Roberts stripe in society, passing the plate in church, and everywhere well received. To preserve the law of averages, the women here always had to accept a double measure of blame.

SYMPATHY FOR MISS LUSK.

But the thing that makes this trial so thrilling, from its human standpoint, is that the age-old decree in regard to women seems to be changing. Roberts sits in the court-room shunned alike by men and women, while Grace Lusk is surrounded by a throng that constantly assures her sympathy.

And sympathy she is entitled to. I believe I have never heard a plea from the heart more appealing than something she said to me the other day in court, during recess.

"What sentence can be imposed on me that could equal the fate I have thrust upon myself?"

I should like to give a bound copy of Grace Lusk's story to every girl who goes out into the world to earn a living. And one to the girls that stay home, too.

REVOLTED AT DECEIT.

It is the tragic story of a good girl gone wrong.

Having sinned, her intrinsic honesty revolted at the policy of concealment and deception that she was forced to adopt.

A less honest woman might not have rebelled, and agreed to maintain the hush at any methods that were satisfactory to Dr. Roberts, but Grace Lusk clamored for some justification for her act in the way of an open acknowledgement.

Her passionate desire that his wife be told she relterated until it became a monomaniac one. And to the doctor, he declined to take it seriously, or the little swearing, or the gun toting that went with it.

To him it was just a case of "nerves," that he promised and procrastinated, promised and procrastinated until the tragic finale was accomplished.

It seems curious that Dr. Roberts, with his solid code of morals, could have held the affection of two women like his wife and Grace Lusk. Mrs. Roberts, from all I have heard from her friends and neighbors, was a fine type of woman and, no matter how mistaken she may have ben in her policy of condoning her husband's infidelity, she did this from the highest and most altruistic motives.

"THE MEAL TICKET."

I am afraid that wives who made "forgiving" a business, may not always claim such disinterested motives as the poor woman who lost her life as a result of the veterinarian's constitutional philadering.

Often it is a case of what some one has called, with brutal frankness, a "hold on the meal ticket."

The wife is simply maintaining herself along the lines of least resistance and her position is as lacking in dignity as it is pitiful.

When there are children who would suffer from a broken up household, something may be said fr the woman's holding on to a man who no longer cares about her.

But when there areno children and the arrangement is a case of "meal ticket" the only term that fits the wife is too ugly to be applied.

CAN FIND NO EXCUSE.

At present with the world clamoring for every pair of hands that have been created, to push along the work of the war, there is no excuse for a woman sitting down and being cared for by a husband who dispises her.

Her only excuse for decent and honorable if she goes out and finds herself employed than if she remains at home and blinks at the infidelities of an immoral husband.

From the trial at Waukesha a manual of domestic relations might be written, but the most valuable lesson of all is Grace Lusk's record of warning:

"Let married men alone."

TO UNFURL 235-STAR FLAG AT THE PIERCE SCHOOL

Tomorrow afternoon there will be a memorial service at the Henry L. Pierce School, Dorchester, when a service flag bearing 257 stars will be unfurled in honor of ex-Guard of the school in various branches of the service, many being on the French battlefront.

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, father of John F., Jr., who is in the Naval Reserve, and Lieutenant Thomas A. Fitzgerald, U. S. A., both graduates of the school and represented by two stars in the flag, will be the orator. Other speakers will be Judge Michael J. Sullivan, chairman of the School Committee; William W. Howe, master of the school. There will be patriotic airs by Albert C. Ormitt and a chorus of the children of the school.

Members of Benjamin Stone, Jr., Post 68, G. A. R. and John A. Andrew Post, G. A. R., have been invited to attend.

MAKE DETAILS OF SECRET JAP AGREEMENT PUBLIC

Tokio, May 27.—Details of the new Chinese-Japanese secret agreement made public here, indicate that it will become effective by the mobilization of armies of the two countries to repel the incursion of an enemy which threatens their territories.

The agreement further provides that it is to remain in effect only for the duration of the war against the Central Powers and is to be abrogated at the close of hostilities. Should there be no occasion for the mobilization of the armies of Japan and China for the defense of territory against German aggression, the agreement would possibly never be in force.

Announcement of the signing of the agreement reached Tokio on May 20.

MILLIONAIRE'S WIFE DIGS TO HELP WIN THE WAR

A snapshot of Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, wife of the prominent New York banker, in the garden of the Vanderlip Summer home at Scarborough, N. Y. Mrs. Vanderlip played a prominent role in the great task of organizing the 48 States for Liberty Loan work among women, as a member of the National Women's Liberty Loan committee, of which Mrs. William G. McAdoo is the chairman. In addition to her work for the three loan campaigns, she has ever been an indefatigable worker for the Red Cross, and is ofsly assisting her husband in the W. S. S. campaign.

Kerensky Dead Is the Belief of Russians

An Atlantic Port, May 27.—Alexander Kerensky is believed by the people of Russia to be dead, according to passengers who arrived from Russia via Stockholm, on a Scandinavian-American liner.

None of the passengers had heard the report that Kerensky was expected to seek asylum in America, until so informed by newspaper men. Those who came from Petrograd, including the Baron and Baroness Naydell, declared all the Russian people believed Kerensky went into hiding to die of the disease which incapacitated him from field service many months ago.

BURGLARS MOVE SAFE AND THEN ROB IT

Bayonne, N. J., May 27.—Burglars entered the butcher shop of Port & Weinrich, No. 503 Avenue C, and dragged a safe weighing a ton to a back room. They jimmied it open and took $1,800. A cash register yielded $11. A family living above the store heard none of the moving-day sounds.

ANNA HELD, AT DEATH'S DOOR, CHEERFUL

Whole Bone Structure Crumbling, Treatment Cannot Rout Strange Malady

By International News Service.

New York, May 27. — Anna Held, actress, is swiftly approaching her death, as announced to Dr. Donald McCaskey, her physician.

"The end may come at any time, or she may possibly last several weeks," said Dr. McCaskey. He added that he considered Miss Held's friends had the right to know that all chances for her recovery had been dissipated with the continued advancement of symptoms of disease progress.

Miss Held has been informed that her end is near, and has accepted the verdict with her accustomed cheerfulness. Everything possible is being done to contribute to her comfort, and Dr. McCaskey stated that his patient bears herself like a stoic.

Miss Held gave a remarkable demonstration of will power and vitality today by partaking of a substantial breakfast in a chair by the window in her apartments here. She was reported as "resting easily."

CAN'T FIGHT THE DISEASE.

"Three weeks have elapsed since Miss Held received her blood transfusion of twenty-five ounces," said Dr. McCaskey. "Her blood condition continues good, her food is well assimilated and she is handling all her system well. Mentally her condition is clear as a bell. Her philosophy and courage are wonderful.

"But Miss Held's bones still disintegrate and the malignant disease, which is called multiple myeloma, and is very rare, continues to attack her entire bone structure in spite of better blood.

"After her three weeks' battle for life it is now clear that the malignant destructive force which has insidiously been wrecking her bones' marrow and bones is stronger than all the constructive forces we can rally to her support.

"She is slipping backward, slowly, steadily, surely, to the end. She gained in music, strength and vitality until the fractures of her vertebras occurred the other day. She then bone collapse, spinal anesthesia and motor paralysis symptoms have set in as a result of the pressure and disturbance of her spinal cord.

KEEPS HER GOOD CHEER.

"The recent attack of pneumonia also invaded her left temporal bone, affecting the hearing of the ear.

"Miss Held calmly realizes the situation and helps us make her as comfortable as possible."

Multiple myeloma was discovered by Dr. Kahler in 1895, and but 200 cases have been recorded. Miss Held's case makes the 205th.

Miss Held was asked me to thank everybody who has written, telegraphed or telephoned about her, with offers of kindly aid. She talks over the telephone herself and still can sit up for brief periods in her invalid chair. She listens to music and enjoys the brief visits of her friends.

"Miss Held is 'going through' with a Joan of Arc courage."

KILLS HIMSELF AS HIS FATHER DID 11 YEARS AGO

Eleven years after the suicide of his father, Donald de Loreix, twenty-eight, of No. 371 Harvard street, Cambridge, ended his life by shooting at his mother's Summer cottage at Marblehead Neck.

The police are not able to give a reason for the act. The young man's father shot himself after escaping his attendants at the Mclean Hospital in Waverley. De Loreix had been in poor health, and business matters had annoyed him. He had been in a hospital and had four times failed to pass examinations for entrance to the army. His heart was weak. He was a Harvard graduate, and was prominent in club affairs and in athletic circles, being a yachtsman.

NEW YORK POLICE RID PARKS OF "SPOONERS"

New York, May 27.—A crusade to "make the parks safe for decorum," has been started by Police Commissioner Knight. Its aim is to discourage the automobilists who on Sunday and Sunday nights leave their cars to "spoon" in secluded nooks. Police Captain John Coughlin of the Bronx branch has charge of a force of detectives, in cars and on foot, who scoured those regions last night. They surprised many couples blissfully spooning.

BESSARABIA "WILLING," SAYS RUMANIAN REPLY

Geneva, May 27.—Answering the Ukrainian protest against the annexation of the Russian province of Bessarabia, Rumania has notified the Ukrainian government at Kiev that Bessarabia "willingly joined the mother country," said advices received today.

The central empires consented to the annexation of Bessarabia by Rumania during the eastern peace parley.

President Favors Mourning Band with Stars

Washington, May 27.—In a letter to Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, chairman of the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense, President Wilson approves the suggestion of the committee that, instead of the conventional mourning for relatives who have died in the service of their country, American women should wear a black band on the left arm, with a gilt star on the band for each member of the family who has given up his life for the nation. The President's letter:

"My Dear Dr. Shaw:

"Thank you for your letter of yesterday. I do entirely approve of the action taken by the women's committee in executive session, namely, that a three-inch black band should be worn upon the left arm, that there may be placed for each member of the family whose life is lost in the service, and that the band shall be worn on the left arm.

"I hope and believe that thoughtful people everywhere will approve of this action, and I hope that you will be kind enough to make the suggestion of the committee known with the statement that it has my most cordial indorsement.

"Cordially and sincerely yours,
"WOODROW WILSON."

YANKEE SOLDIER OWES LIFE TO BIBLE

Bullet Grazes Chest After Piercing Through Trench Mirror and New Testament

By BERT FORD.
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

With the American Army in France, May 27.—The Bible as an instrument for saving soldiers' lives has already been a favorite theme in poetry and fiction. In the case of William Wilson, of No. 428 Sheridan avenue, Newcastle, Pa., however, there is more truth than poetry as regards his narrow escape from death, thanks to his pocket Bible. Wilson is nineteen years old, and a member of an infantry unit in a sector held by Americans in Picardy.

A German sniper shot Wilson in the left chest. The steel jacketed bullet was prevented from reaching his heart by a long by a pocket edition of the New Testament and a steel trench mirror. The bullet punctured the steel mirror, planing the ragged edges of the metal into the cover of the Bible. It passed entirely through the book, defacing only part of Wilson's address written in ink on the frontispiece. The young Pennsylvanian was struck by another bullet in the right arm. The bullet that passed through the Bible caused scarcely more than a flesh wound in his chest.

Wilson was operated upon at an American field hospital and then was transferred to a French hospital in the rear. The surgeons were astonished by the character of the wound. Investigation disclosed that the mirror and Bible were fastened together by the impact. He had carried them in the left breast pocket of his blouse.

TO KEEP SOUVENIR.

At the request of the field hospital surgeons, I took the Bible and the mirror to Wilson as a souvenir, Wilson lay on his cot, his eyes closed, and visibly weak from the loss of blood resulting from his wound in his arm. He is recovering rapidly however.

When I held up the Bible, he uttered a single word:

"Mine."

Then he reached for it with his left arm, pressed it tenderly and murmured, "I want to keep it always, it saved my life."

See this name under mine," he went on, "O. W. Wilson, Co. M." That's the Y. M. C. A. secretary who gave me the Bible."

Asked for some details about himself, Wilson said:

"I enlisted after finishing a course at an orphan's school. I was on liaison duty in the trench by counter attack. The Americans thereby suffered heavy losses.

While it is quite probable that the Americans lost a few men as prisoners, there is nothing to bear out the "heavy losses" mentioned in the German dispatch from Amsterdam.

This is the first time mention is made in the War Office report of losses of Americans on the Picardy front. The Berlin statement discloses for the first time the exact location of the American troops that were recently officially reported to have taken up front line positions on the vital battlefield southeast of Amiens. Montdidier, some twenty miles southeast of Amiens, is the pivot upon which rests the defence of that city and the defence of Paris. It is the southwesternmost point of the German advance.

From Montdidier the German line runs along the Avre to Moreuil and thence northeastward to just north of Villers-Bretonneux and to Corbie.

SAYS ENGLAND NEVER CAN REPAY AMERICA

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 27.—"England, after the war, will owe a debt to the United States which she can never repay," F. W. Wilson, member of the House of Commons, told a gathering in the Marcy Avenue Baptist Church. He added: "Before she entered the war America was in debt to England for her safety. But now we are in debt to America, and that debt will increase as long as the war continues. The messages of President Wilson have given hope to encourage the war-weary working people of Great Britain than anything else has done."

SUDDEN "PROMOTION" LEADS TO MAN'S ARREST

New York, May 27.—George Esposito, twenty-eight years old, of West Twenty-sixth street, and Twenty-third street, was arrested in East Eighty-fourth street, charged with desertion from the army. Esposito was dressed in the police say, in the uniform of an army officer, and the patrolman recognized him as a private in the army. In the neighborhood as a private. The officers suspicions were aroused by the sudden promotion. He questioned Esposito, who, he said, admitted he deserted from Camp Merritt.

AMERICANS WIN TWO VICTORIES; TAKE GERMANS

Washington, D. C., May 27.—American troops have won two local victories on the western battle front, one in the Picardy sector, southeast of Amiens, and the other on the Lorraine border.

The first fight, in Picardy, was as daring as it was successful. American can detachments made an incursion into the enemy lines west of Montdidier, in a so-called "silent" raid, meaning there was no artillery preparation or barrage fire to protect the men as they went over the top.

German defences were destroyed, and a number of the trench garrisons were either killed or taken prisoners.

The official statement from the Berlin War Office claims that some Americans were captured in this sector, while a semi-official dispatch through Amsterdam says "heavy losses" were inflicted on the Pershing detachments.

The semi-official statement reads: "West of Montdidier, strong American patrol advanced against our front. One American patrol was entirely cut up by our fire. The others fell back by counter attack. The Americans thereby suffered heavy losses."

This is the first time mention is made in the War Office report of losses of Americans on the Picardy front. The Berlin statement discloses for the first time the exact location of the American troops that were recently officially reported to have taken up front line positions on the vital battlefield southeast of Amiens. "LASSIES" FRY CAKES FOR YANKEES

Serve Hot Doughnuts and Pie Free to Men in the Trenches

By BERT FORD.
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

With the American Army in France, April 25 (by Mail)—Fancy making apple pies and frying doughnuts, hundreds of them, with a steel helmet on, and a gas mask slung over your shoulder.

Such equipment may be foreign to domestic pursuits and comfort, but it is necessary while toiling back of the front lines, whether pounding dough or a typewriter, giving military orders or harvesting news for the folks back home.

That is why respirators and helmets, which the doughboys have nicknamed "Carnegie derbies" or "Steel Stetsons," have become just as much a part of the apparel of the American girls who are acting as ensigns in the Salvation Army canteens in the sectors held by the Yankee troops on the Western front as aprons and hairpins.

Said Ensign Myrtle Turkington of South Manchester, Ct.: "I don't know whether I can ever again get accustomed to a hat with trimmings after sporting a helmet so long. The chin strap reminds me of the elastic we wore when little girls. The gas masks and helmets are the first things we look for in the morning and the last things we note the location of late at night before retiring. You never know what instant either or both might save your life. They are indispensable in the danger zone."

DELICIOUS DOUGHNUTS.

I had often dropped in with other correspondents to the Salvation Army canteen for coffee and doughnuts, and such delicious doughnuts they always are, hot and crisp, the kind "mother used to make." And it doesn't make any difference what the day or the hour. You can always bank on getting a steaming wedge of apple pie or fresh-made doughnuts in a Salvation Army canteen. And a smile and a cheerful greeting.

That is what has reached the hearts of officers and men, the eagerness to serve, late or early, or all night if necessary, and to serve free when a buck private finds his pockets empty, which is a common status 'twixt pay days.

I visited a Salvation Army canteen the first time on a rainy Sunday. The mud was ankle deep. The "lads had been jammed with American troops more than twenty-four hours. The canteen was in a village, nearly every house in which had been shattered by shells. There was an ancient grist mill the roof of which had been blown off and part of the walls. A faded canvas had been strung across the top. It was not exactly waterproof.

BUSY AS BEAVERS.

There was as much mud inside as outside, due to the constant stream of soldiers. The atmosphere was cold and clammy. The Misses Gladys and Irene McIntyre of Mount Vernon, N. Y., Stella Young of Chelsea, Mass., and Miss Myrtle Turkington of South Manchester, Ct., wearing fresh aprons, helmets and gas masks—nobody could enter the sector without said war paraphernalia — were busy as beavers making new vats of coffee and cocoa, mixing new dough, shaping doughnuts and removing them from a young reservoir of sizzling lard.

SAY MINISTER'S AUTO KILLED RED CROSS BOY

Edgartown, N. J., May 27.—William Brown, seventeen years old, of Red Bank, N. J., was killed by an automobile said to have been driven by an evangelist of Brooklyn. Young Brown, with several companions, was soliciting contributions for the Red Cross from autoists. He approached the car of the evangelist, expecting it to stop. Instead, the machine knocked young Brown into a gutter. The youth was taken to the Long Branch Hospital, where he died in a few hours. The police are looking for the minister.

LAWYER DENIES DISRESPECT FOR COURT

J. J. Fitzgerald of Providence Declares He Did Not Quit Case; Only Courtroom

Providence, May 27.—John J. Fitzgerald, prominent criminal lawyer, who was cited into the Superior Court by Judge Sweeney in contempt proceedings, testified in a caustic colloquy that he had intended no slight on the court. His counsel, John P. Beegan, secured an extension until Saturday to file a brief.

Fitzgerald was reprimanded by Judge Sweeney last Wednesday for his manner of handling witnesses at the trial of his client, Henry "Rosner, on a charge of conspiring to have his automobile stolen.

Fitzgerald announced that he withdrew from the case. Judge Sweeney said he would not permit him to. Fitzgerald left the courtroom. Attorney A. Archambault took up the cross-examination of Roy White, who was on the stand when Fitzgerald left.

Rosener was found guilty Friday. Fitzgerald had not appeared meanwhile and was cited for contempt.

Today Fitzgerald declared he had withdrawn only after cross-examining witnesses, but not from the case. Eight witnesses testified that while Fitzgerald had not been in the courtroom, he had been active in the case. Each witness admitted never having heard of counsel withdrawing in the face of court orders.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF $125,000 THEFT

PASSENGER AND FREIGHT RATES INCREASED

New Schedule to Go Into Effect in June, by Order of Director McAdoo

and sleeping cars and parlor cars will be required to pay an additional passenger fare of one-half cent a mile, and those traveling in tourist sleeping cars an additional charge of one-quarter cent a mile.

Transportation fares are not included in the general increases, but are advanced 10 per cent. Non-transferable commutation tickets purchased before yesterday will be honored without additional charge to the date of expiration. All commutation tickets bought from today will be honored until June 10, when they may be redeemed for unused trips.

LIBERAL REDEMPTION RULES.

Liberal rules provide for the redemption of partially unused tickets prior to the effective date of the order. Such tickets, however, will not be honored after that date. Partially used one-way tickets will be redeemed by charging for the used portion at the time the journey was begun and refunding the difference.

Mileage tickets partially used will be redeemed on the basis of what the purchaser paid per mile for the ticket, for the unused portion. Advanced fares become effective on June 10 and will apply on both State and interstate travel.

The increased freight rates become effective June 25 and all class rates less than 25 cents first class and proportionate rates on other classes will be cancelled.

Commodities' rates are included in the 25 per cent. increase, excepting commodities of which there is a heavy movement. On these commodities, advances will be made by adding certain amounts to all rates or by fixing specifically the new rates which shall apply.

The principal heavy commodities affected and the advances thereon follow:

COAL RATE ADVANCED.

Coal from 15 to 60 cents per ton.

Coke 75 cents per ton.

Iron ore 40 cents per ton.

Stone for building purposes, 3 cents per hundred pounds.

Stone for road work, sand and gravel, 1 cent per hundred pounds.

Brick cement and plaster 2 cents per one hundred pounds.

Lime ¼ cent per hundred pounds.

Lumber, 25 per cent., but not more than 5 cents per hundred pounds.

Grain, flour and other mill products, an average of 25 per cent., but not more than 6 cents per hundred pounds.

Cotton, 15 cents per hundred pounds.

Livestock, 25 per cent., but not more than 7 cents per hundred pounds.

Sugar, 25 per cent., except to points in Middle states. Rates from the different producing sections will be maintained on the present relationship.

Copper bullion and smelter products will be advanced approximately 16.83 per ton from the Rocky Mountains and Pacific Coast States to Atlantic seaboard.

All exports and imports rates will be cancelled; the domestic will apply to and from the ports after June 25.

The minimum charge for handling a less than carload shipment will be fifty cents and for road-hauling a carload the minimum will be $15 under the new order.

Important established rate grouping and fixed differentials will be continued where found practicable.

PROVISION FOR APPEAL.

Appeal may be made to the interstate commerce commission where rates are considered unreasonable. During Federal control, Congress has provided that the President may initiate rates whenever the public interest demands it. This power, in accordance with law by proclamation, was transferred to Director-General McAdoo. It is under this authority that Mr. McAdoo has made the advances in rates.

Director-General McAdoo pointed out today that it was important to make clear that no part of the increase in rates was due to the making of additions and betterments.

"It is earnestly hoped," he said, "that all citizens affected directly or indirectly by this increase in rates will support the general principle of such increases as a war measure.

"There is this distinction," he added, "in considering these increases. They are fundamentally different from any rate increases ever proposed or allowed when results were under private control. There is no way in which the present increases will inure to private profit. If they turn out to be more than are needed to meet the grave exigency, they will promptly be readjusted.

"But pending such readjustments the excesses, if any, will be for the benefit of the people of the United States as a whole and not for the benefit of the private railroad owners or any of them."

Reductions in rates will be made from time to time to the extent that saving can be effected. Economies and reduced prices for railroad materials will probably bring the first reductions, it was said.

What New Railroad Rates Mean to Passengers

Here's the way the new passenger rates, as announced by Director-General McAdoo to take effect June 10, will affect the passenger:

Everybody after that date will have to pay three cents a mile, traveling within the State or out of it.

If you use a mileage book it will cost you three cents a mile.

If you use a commutation ticket; that is, a ticket designed for suburban travel, it will cost you 10 per cent. more than the present rate.

If you are in the service you may travel at the rate of one cent per mile only on furlough or official leave of absence. You will not be granted this privilege or reduced fare on short-term passes from camps or on liberty from ships or stations to nearby cities.

Sleeping and parlor car tickets will cost an extra 16 2-3 per cent. of the normal one-way fare. Tourist sleeping car tickets will cost 8 1-3 more of the normal one-way fare.

You can't beat this increase by buying a ticket prior to June 10, except that if you are en route on that date you will be carried to your destination.

If you are on a journey using a round-trip ticket on that date you may complete the trip at the original cost except that if you want to use a sleeper or parlor car it will cost you the 16 2-3 extra.

All stop-overs on one-way tickets, side trips at reduced fares, and the privilege of staying over longer in one place than it would be necessary for you to complete your trip are discontinued.

All tickets made invalid by this order will be redeemed. Unused tickets will be redeemed.

On and after June 10 the government will pay you for the unused portions of your mileage or scrip ticket the difference between its total cost and used portion at the rate of purchase.

The increase of freight rates takes effect June 25.

All interstate class rates shall be increased on that date 25 per cent.

All intra-state class rates will be increased 25 per cent. where there are no interstate class rates published between the same points.

$300,000,000 Increase in Railroad Wages Ordered by McAdoo

Washington, May 27.—The wage increase granted to railroad employes by Director-General McAdoo in General Order No. 27, will amount to about $300,000,000 per year. The order applies to 184 railroads, and in addition to such roads "all terminals, union stations and switching companies, all or a majority of whose stock is owned by the railroads named." Such railroads as may be retained in Federal control on July 1, will be added to the list, and the Pullman Company, whose status is now being considered, will also be added if decision shall be reached to retain the Pullman Company under Federal control.

The wage increases are included in article 2, and are sub-divided as follows: Employes paid upon a monthly basis, daily basis, hourly basis, piece work and mileage basis.

GERARD RAPS CHICAGO BOARD OF EDUCATION

New York, May 27.—James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, was chief speaker at the Sunday night forum at the Church of the Messiah. Dr. Gerard said the Chicago board of education was traitorous, that in the schools there the royal cult of Armin of Germany adorned the textbooks. One of the books contained a eulogy of the Kaiser. The Bismarck High School of that city could not be induced to change its name, he declared.

MAN AND WIFE ARE HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Polen of No. 619 Morton street were struck by an automobile driven by Edward M. Hall, No. 362 Waltham street, West Newton. They were crossing the street in front of their home.

The physician who attended them found that Mrs. Polen had slight bruises of the left elbow and right leg. Mr. Polen escaped unhurt.

FATHER FINDS LITTLE BOY SLEEPING ON CAR TRACK

Little George Wiley, Jr., the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wiley of North Weymouth, was found by his father peacefully sleeping between the rails of the Bay State Street Railway track. The Wileys recently removed from Lowell street to the Fort Point Hotel, and the little boy attempted to walk back to his old home. The railway here he laid down on the car track and fell asleep.

POLICE ARREST PAXTON AS SLAYER OF WARREN

Following the death of Julius Warren of No. 82 Dedham street at the City Hospital, Harry Paxton of No. 112 West Springfield street was arrested by the police of the East Dedham street station on the charge of assault and battery with intent to kill.

Warren was shot and fatally wounded while in his home early Sunday morning.

STOCK MARKET FAILS TO SHOW REAL LIFE

Rails Are the Only Group Displaying Early Strength; Slight Rally Follows

Rails were the only group to show strength in an active first hour on the stock market today, and they soon fell into line with the rest of the market. The weakness was attributed, by some to the discussion of revenue legislation by President Wilson at 1 o'clock this afternoon. New Haven was one of the most active rails and ranged from 42⅝ (up ⅜) to 40⅝ (off 2⅝). It then recovered a point. Reading was off 1⅜ at 86, recovering to 87, after an opening gain of ⅜. Union Pacific went from 121⅝ (up ⅛), to 120⅜ (off ⅜).

Baldwin Locomotive was a feature, opening unchanged at 90⅜, it slumped to 87⅜. U. S. Steel opened off ⅜ at 104⅛, then slid down to 105⅝, after selling for 102, but in the middle of the second hour it was quoted at 103⅝.

Other low prices were, Bethlehem Steel B 82, off 1⅜; Anaconda 64, off 1⅛; Mexican Petroleum 82⅝, off 2⅛; Tobacco Products 57½, off 1⅛; Industrial Alcohol 130, o. 2⅜; Midvale Steel 56, off 1⅜; and Central Leather 66, off 1⅜.

Colorado Fuel, after a gain at the opening, receded to 50, off 1¼. Marine preferred showed fractional gains and losses. Locally Boston Elevated sold for 72¾, then dropped a point to 71¾, a loss of ¼. Both issues of Massachusetts Electric were lower by a fraction. United Shoe Machinery lost ⅝ of a point at 45⅜, and United Fruit was unchanged at 124.

At midday the market rallied after some stocks had declined below the first hour's prices. During the noon hour both markets were very quiet.

General motors fell back to 118, then rallied to 119⅜, off 3 points.

Slight gains were shown by Union Pacific, St. Paul, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, Southern Railway and Corn Products.

In Boston United Shoe Machinery sold for 45⅛, a loss of one point, and New Haven was fractionally lower.

FIRST VICTIM OF CLEANUP CRUSADE

The first victim of the crusade which Dr. Thomas J. Jordan of the Board of Health has started, in an effort to clean up Dorchester's back yards, was Israel Gressman of Fernboro street, who was fined $5 in the Dorchester court by Judge Sullivan. Patrolman Roger Flynn complained that Gressman threw refuse in his back yard contrary to the ordinance.

FOUR OF FAMILY DEAD IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Two Palmer Children Die in Maine Hospital; Parents Were Killed

Wells Beach, Me., May 27.—Fifteen-year-old Scott Palmer and his eleven-year-old brother Edson of Rochester, N. H., have died at a Biddeford hospital from injuries received in the automobile accident here yesterday which caused the death of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Palmer, within two hours. The death-roll now numbers four. Doris, the thirteen-year-old daughter, is in the hospital with a broken shoulder. Carl, the Palmer baby, was hurled thirty feet, but escaped injury.

Scott Palmer, the oldest boy, was driving the car when it was struck by a Boston & Maine freight train at Braddon's crossing, a short distance west of the railroad station. The police think that the boy lost his head and tried to get across the track ahead of the slowly moving train. The automobile was demolished.

FIRE EXCITEMENT AS DRAFTEES LEAVE

Considerable excitement was caused in a crowd of 2,500 people listening on the Cambridge Common today to Governor McCall addressing eighty-two draftees leaving for Camp Upton, L. I., when fire apparatus went clattering by in response to a still alarm.

A moment and the Governor was again interrupted by more apparatus which responded to a bell alarm for a fire in the Bay State apartments, at the other end of the Common.

Leo A. Diehl, a boseman, fell down a flight of steps to the basement and broke his right arm.

800 CZECHS ARRESTED IN PRAGUE OUTBREAKS

Geneva, May 27.—Eight hundred Czechs are reported to have been arrested at Prague (Bohemia) as a result of outbreaks there last week. Advices received here today said that conditions are normal again.

International News Service dispatches last week told of an uprising in which thousands of persons paraded the principal thoroughfares of Prague shouting "Viva Wilson."

SLAYER OF WARREN HELD WITHOUT BAIL

AUTO DRIVER FINED $50 AFTER INJURY TO FIVE

Carl H. Olson, driver of an automobile which was upset with injury to five persons while returning to Wellesley on April 24 from a picnic in Natick, was fined $50 in Dedham Court today for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He admitted having taken a glass of beer before starting. There were seven persons in the car with Olson. Three women and two men, one of whom was the chauffeur, were hurt when the car upset after running fifty feet off the roadway. One of Olson's arms was broken and was in a sling when he appeared in court. Olson is chauffeur for F. M. Forbes, a Boston broker living in Wellesley.

PERSHING DROPS HIS OFFICIAL REPORTS

By NEWTON C. PARKE, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army in France, May 27.—Effective today, the issuance of official communiques has been discontinued, on orders from Washington.

Washington, May 27.—War Department officials deny that orders have been given General Pershing to discontinue his daily war communique. The report caused surprise here, and no satisfactory explanation could be offered.

The officers directly concerned in the relations with Pershing and the War Department stated that it is possible the daily communique will be no longer issued from General Pershing's headquarters, but will be given out here.

Officers agree that there is no reason to believe that daily official reports from the American army will be denied the American public.

END SHOE STRIKE AS LYNN WORKMAN AIDS WAR FUND

The 350 shoe workers in the T. J. Kiley factory, Lynn, who went on strike Saturday because a laster employed by the firm refused to contribute to the Lynn war chest fund, returned today, having been informed that the man had agreed to give twenty-five cents a week. He earns $35 a week, and, according to fellow employes, even refused to buy a Liberty Bond.

TROLLEY LINE TO THE FISH PIER OPENED

J. J. Phelan Urges Extension of Freight Service to Solve Traffic Problem

In opening today the new trolley freight railway line to the fish pier, James J. Phelan, originator of the idea, urged a great extension of the trolley freight service, whereby trucks do through the streets of Boston may be handled at night by cars instead of congesting the streets during the day with horse and motor vehicles.

The opening of the new railway will enable cars of the Boston, Worcester and Bay State Street Railway to run direct to the fish pier, which is 200 feet from the railroad's freight yard for loading fish to be consigned over the Boston.

The guests at the formal opening included Mr. Phelan, George H. Ellis, Prof. James Hardy Ropes, W. L. Putnam, John L. Stevens and J. Frank O'Hare of the Food Administration; William J. O'Brien of the fish pier corporation and officials of the street railway companies.

Mr. Phelan, in his address, said that Mr. Endicott and the other members of the Public Safety Committee believe that this new railway would be of considerable value in the dispatch of food and in its conservation, and that to some degree it may affect costs. There should be, he felt, twenty-four-hour service by street car companies, whereby freight could be carried at night. This would relieve street congestion and do away with the present teaming arrangements.

The new railway was begun last Fall by the Waterways Commission and would have been completed much earlier except that materials were not available. The cost was $50,000, of which $40,000 was borne by the commission and $10,000 came from the war emergency fund.

The new rail line connects with the Boston Elevated tracks on Summer street.

TRAINLOADS OF DRAFT MEN LEAVE CITY

Hundreds of Relatives and Friends Cheer Embryo Soldiers at South Station

Three trainloads of drafted men from Greater Boston and Eastern Massachusetts left here today for Camp Upton, at Yaphank, N. Y. Hundreds of persons assembled at the South Station to see them off.

Alexander Dolinsky, 24, of No. 23 Preston street, Dorchester, who finished the station in ample time to take the train, was not permitted to by Chairman Doherty of the Division 18 draft board, because the board had not reported at the draft board headquarters before going to the train.

There were 124 Dorchester men who left on the first train, at about 9.30. It was late in pulling out because of the farewells to the boys by their many friends. Among the Dorchester men was Lawrence Weidman, formerly a reporter for the AMERICAN.

GOT THERE TOO LATE.

When Dolinsky was refused permission to board the train with the rest, his father registered a complaint. Chairman Doherty would make no statement other than that Dolinsky had failed to report at the draft board on time.

"I appeared before Chairman Doherty Saturday," Dolinsky said today, "and told him I had a number of automobile accessories to dispose of, and asked for an extension of time. He would not allow me any further time and said that he would send the police after me if I did not show up today.

"I was notified to be at the draft board today at 8:15 a. m. I live a long way from the board headquarters and the cars were late, so that I reached the place late. Therefore I came on to the South Station and got here ahead of the rest. I reported to Chairman Doherty, who ordered me to appear before the board later. 'You know what I can do with you, don't you' he asked me." Dolinsky is an amateur boxer.

FOUR CARS FOR SPRINGFIELD.

Ten women of the Red Cross canteen service were at the station to supply the men with coffee, sandwiches and cigarettes. There were men from several Boston divisions, though mainly from Dorchester, and their friends and relatives filled the concourse. There was a struggle to get through the gate to the train and one of the patrolmen guarding it had his helmet knocked off in the cheering and the waving of flags the trains pulled out.

The train on which the Dorchester men left had four extra cars, on which to take a delegation from Springfield. A second train took a number of drafted men from eastern Massachusetts cities and towns and a third train was filled with drafted men from Medford, Malden, Haverhill and Somerville.

Among the Medford men was Augustus Morelli, who was given a send-off by Mr. and Mrs. George Rossi, their niece, Elizabeth Klingston, and George Rossi, Jr.

Thirty-two Salem men left that city on an early train for Camp Upton and delegations from Danvers and Peabody came later. The Mayor and City Council of Salem escorted the men to the train.

The draftees assembled in Quincy square and were escorted by the Radio School boys, headed by the Radio School band, a sprinkling of G. A. R. veterans and members of the Cambridge city government led by Mayor Quinn. They marched to the Cambridge Common, where farewell exercises were held at the Soldiers' Monument.

The Radio School boys formed in double line, received the Governor, who spoke inspiringly to the draftees of the lessons the war has taught us and of the fine record made in France by the 100,000 New England boys serving there.

Mayor Quinn and Dr. John F. Good, president of the City Council, also spoke words of encouragement and appreciation of the sacrifices the draftees were making.

U-BOAT WHISTLE WAS TRAP FOR MOLDAVIA

London, May 27.—Just before the transport Moldavia, carrying American troops, was attacked and sunk by a German submarine, a whistle was heard in the fog, indicating that a collision was imminent, according to a dispatch to the Express today from a channel port quoting an officer who was in command of a detachment on the troopship. It is now believed that the whistle was sounded by the submarine itself and was a trick to trap the vessel. As soon as the whistle was heard all lights on the Moldavia were switched on.

The thick weather which was prevailing assisted the U-boat in its work of destruction. Five minutes before the ship was sent down the weather was so foggy that one's hand could not be seen before the face, the officer stated.

The moon broke through the clouds just as the vessel was struck. It was a fortunate thing that it remained moonlight for an hour, as the light greatly assisted in transferring the survivors.

HALF PEOPLE OF TURKEY ARE REPORTED STARVING

London, May 27.—Half of the population of Turkey is said to be starving, according to a Constantinople dispatch to the Daily Express today. Butter is selling at $9 a pound and other foodstuffs are equally high. Armenian and Syrian girls are being sold into slavery as their masters cannot support them.

CHILDREN WILL PICK FLOWERS FOR SICK

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, May 27.—The people of eastern Massachusetts, with their traditions of the sea, seem to have adopted the sailors of the Receiving Ship with wide open arms. Not only have they opened their homes and clubs to them but have provided in various ways for their entertainment, but of late they have been sending flowers to the ship. These have been greatly appreciated by the boys, especially by those who have been so unfortunate as to be confined in the Sick Bay.

The sending of flowers was begun by Mrs. Harriet Macartne of Marston Mills, a Cape Cod school teacher, who during the season that arbutus was in flower forwarded large quantities of the blossoms. Later the work was taken up by Miss Evelyn Cross of Stoneham, who enlisted the services of many children in the work of scouring the woods and fields in search of wild blooms.

Now it is planned to give this work, which had its inception in interest in the sailors on the ship, a wider scope. It is expected that before the Summer is over the Naval, Marine and other hospitals in the vicinity of Boston will be caring for sick and wounded. Arrangements are under way to utilize the services of many school children in Greater Boston during vacation season in gathering flowers, which will be sent to the ship to be distributed to these places.

Office Secretary Charles E. Lawrence of the Y. M. C. A. will have charge of this work as it develops. Already he has been promised several automobile loads of flowers each week.

It is expected that Paymaster William O'Brien will get the Overseas Transportation Agency, which is in charge of the shipment of supplies of all kinds for our military and naval forces abroad, well established in its new quarters on board the ship this week. A painting up and clean-up campaign has been in progress for several days about the quarters that are to be occupied by the new department and they are nearly in shape for occupancy.

EDITORIAL

Allegations of discrimination when it came to operating upon the wives of officers and enlisted men at the base hospital at Camp Devens are without foundation and have worked an injustice upon the officials in charge of the hospital, who are indignant that such an accusation should be made against the institution or its personnel.

There are no accommodations at the hospital for the wives of either officers or enlisted men. Only two women have been kept there over night since the institution was opened. One was the wife of an officer and the other the wife of an enlisted man, both of whom were stricken on the reservation and needed emergency treatment. The wives of all men in the service may go to the hospital for medical advice and attention, but no provisions for performing operations are made.

These are facts presented by Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Powell, division surgeon, which should effectually silence the report that a line is drawn between the wives of officers and those of the men in the ranks.

MORE DRAFTEES ARRIVE AT DEVENS

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, May 27.—Another group of New England draftees arrived here today and underwent their preliminary examinations in the usual manner. They were assigned to company in the depot brigade for rations and quarters, and after passing through the quarantine period and receiving their equipments will be sent into the division.

The new men who came here from Camp Upton are being sent through in the initial paces more rapidly than any other batch of recruits that ever came to this camp. The benefits of the eight months of training most of the veterans in the division have received are being drilled into them as rapidly as possible.

Vacancies in the non-commissioned ranks are being filled by the various company commanders with the experienced men of their command and by the end of the week it is expected that the division will have its full quota of non-commissioned officers.

Some of the outfits are moving their headquarters into tents to give the members of the various headquarters staffs practical experience in carrying on the official business of the respective organizations under conditions similar to those they will encounter in the field.

Fourteen more dentists have arrived at this cantonment within the last fortnight. Captain James H. Keith and Lieutenant Frederick C. Daniels were included in this delegation. They were formerly at this cantonment, but were sent to Camp Greenleaf, Ga., and just recalled.

MEN OF 76TH DIG IN FOR HARD TRAINING

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, May 27.—With the filling of the 76th division to its war strength an atmosphere of activeness has settled over the cantonment and both officers and men have launched into their advanced training with an earnestness that shows that they realize more than ever the importance of the part they will be called upon to play when they go into action against the enemy.

Daily instructions in new trench formations and the latest methods of modern warfare are being given in the trenches at Still River. This section of the cantonment has been turned into a veritable battlefield. The system of trenches and dugouts is said to be the equal of any in Europe and "No MAn's Land" is criss-crossed with an elaborate series of barbed wire entanglements.

Visions tests to teach the men how to sight enemy points advancing under cover of trees, shrubs, bushes and other concealment are receiving much attention from company commanders, and the men are being put through vigorous training stunts while carrying their complete field equipment even in their "time" hikes. This is being done to give the men an accurate idea of what they may expect to experience when they get "over there."

Weeks of intensive training are in store for the soldiers at this cantonment and the remainder of the Summer is expected to be devoted to whipping the division as a unit into fighting trim.

PEEL OFF CALLUSES

Here's Magic! Instant Relief Without Pain

"Hard skin" or callus spots on the sides or the bottom of the feet peel right off without pain or soreness, after you apply a little Freezone, says a Cincinnati authority. This ether drug loosens the dead callused skin so it peels off with the fingers.

A quarter ounce of Freezone costs but a few cents at any pharmacy, but is sufficient to remove every corn or callus from one's feet. This is the only way to free the feet from corns and calluses without soreness, danger or irritation.

After the corn or callus is lifted away the skin beneath is pink and healthy, and not sore, tender or even irritated.

Men Now 21 to Register Wednesday, June 5

One week from Wednesday is Registration Day in the Selective Draft for men of twenty-one years.

THE TIME

Wednesday, June 5, from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m.

THE PLACE

Register at the office of your local board or at place set by such board.

THIS MEANS YOU, IF—

You are a male, citizen or alien, born between June 6, 1896, and June 5, 1897, inclusive. The exceptions are. Officers and enlisted men of Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps, National Guard and Naval Militia in Federal service. Officers' Reserve Corps and enlisted men of Enlisted Reserve Corps in active service.

HOW IT IS DONE

Present yourself on Registration Day at your registration place. If you are away from home and do not plan to be within reach of your local board on June 5, go now to the local board where you happen to be. Have a registration card filled out. Have it certified. Mail it to your local board. Send with it a stamped envelope, addressed to yourself, so the card may be duly returned to you. Mail the registration card to your board in time for them to get it by June 5. If you are ill, send a trustworthy person to prepare your card.

WHEN IN DOUBT

In case you don't know just what to do, go to your local board now, or to the nearest board, and find out.

PENALTY

This registration is very important. Failure is punishable by one year in prison.

"OVER THE TOP" IN RED CROSS DRIVE

frank to Governor McCall, said on Boston Common today for $2,000—at the rate of $1,000 a pound.

The buyer was Abraham Koshland, president of the Boston Wool Trade Association. He has not decided what will be done with the wool, but expects that it will be kept in the association's rooms as a souvenir of the second Red Cross drive.

Governor McCall made a brief address before the auction began, in which he called attention to the wool as a contribution from the White House to further the local Red Cross drive. The wool came "in the grease," and though neither the Governor nor Charles F. Weed, who acted as auctioneer, had a very clear idea what that technical term meant, they agreed that wool must be much more valuable "in the grease" than otherwise.

After the Governor had completed his remarks urging liberal donations to the Red Cross, the wool was turned over to Mr. Weed, who announced the plan by which it would be auctioned.

BIDDING IS LIVELY.

Each bidder gave the amount of his bid, minus that of the bid preceding. Therefore, if the wool stood at $1,000, the next bidder need contribute only $5 cents to the Red Cross, if he chose, and if there were no higher bidder he would get the wool for his quarter. In other words, bidders were expected to contribute the difference between their own bids and those preceding.

Mr. Koshland opened the bidding with an offer of $100, which was run up to $1,000 within a few minutes. Jeremiah Williams, with $200, promptly came through with the second bid, and the wool men of the city competed vigorously for its possession.

The Union Wool Company, which offered the $600 bid, was eclipsed by Eisemann with $700, and kept in the running by oering two more bids until the price reached $1,200. Then the first bid of less than $100 was received—$5 from a man named Arnold, on the outskirts of the crowd.

Kenneth Hutchins raised the bid to $1,400 and Frank Simons to $1,450. Then came a succession of small bids, and for a time it appeared that an 10 cents might determine the possession of the parcel. Vaughan Jealous ultimately raised the figure to $1,500, and then the wool men got a fresh start, Mr. Koshland bidding almost every other time. The price was worked up to $1,850, and then he came through with a jump of $150, to $2,000.

This was the end of the bidding. No one cared to go above that figure and the wool became Mr. Koshland's property.

The wool men marched to the Common before the auction headed by a band. After the wool had been disposed of William H. Kenney of the ambulance service told his experiences in Red Cross work near Verdun, where he drove an automobile for seventy-two hours at a stretch.

During Red Cross week at Keith's Theatre and the Boston Theatre $12,486.89 was raised among the afternoon and evening audiences. The daily drives were led by George Webb, the actor, aided by Red Cross girls, Mr. Webb collecting all the paper money while the Red Cross girls passed baskets for coin contributions.

Then there were auctions from the stage every afternoon and evening of household goods donated by stores, with Mr. Webb as auctioneer. Thus the total was increased by the end of the week to well over the twelve thousand dollar mark. The scores of the respective houses for the week were: Keith's, $5,376.87; Boston Theatre, $4,159.02.

SAYS GERMANS ARE CRUEL TO AMERICANS

An Atlantic Port, May 27.—Several Americans who had been in Germany since the war's outbreak were passengers on a Scandinavian-American line steamship arriving here, together with 300 others from Denmark, Sweden and Russia. Two German submarines halted the ship two hours out from Copenhagen, but permitted her to proceed after scrutinizing her papers.

Miss Bonaventura Spink of Indianapolis, who had been in Berlin since 1912 singing with the Dresden Opera Company, was another passenger. She declared she left Germany because the treatment of Americans became unbearable. They were not so cruelly persecuted, she said, until President Wilson's last message was made public. The failure of their Spring drive and rumors that American troops in large numbers are arriving in France, made the German people especially bitter.

"I have been trying since the first of March to get home," said Miss Spink. "There are but few Americans left in Berlin, and they are trying to get away but find it difficult to obtain passports.

"During the Winter all Germans rejoiced over the coming Spring drive. When the drive came the papers printed glowing accounts of overwhelming victories, and reported their troops but a few miles from Paris.

"As late as March it was vigorously denied in the papers that any American soldiers had landed in France. The burden of the editorials was that it would take the United States at least five years to equip and transport an army of any considerable size to the French shores, and by that time an overwhelming German victory would be won.

"All over Germany the children are being starved that the soldiers may be fed. In fact, all civilians looked starved and emaciated."

Mrs. Ester de Inclan said she was taking her two young sons to their home in Mexico City because they were on the verge of starvation in Germany.

DIRECT PUNISHMENT FOR HUNS ADVOCATED

By International News Service.

London, May 27.—The Express, commenting on the bombing of hospitals by German aviators, says:

"There is only one way of curbing the Huns' murderous energy. Direct punishment must follow each crime. A German town within easy flight distance from our lines should be selected and bombed daily and nightly until it is destroyed."

A Double Memorial Day

Next Thursday, when the Grand Army of the Republic takes its honored way through Boston streets, there will be flowers abundant for every hero, and every hero will be worthy his flowers.

But we will not stop at that. From across the seas will come echoes of marching men. From American camps will come bugle blasts. Therefore we will not stop with having dedicated flowers and wreaths to the veterans who saved this republic. We will dedicate flowers to the boys who are saving the world and to their mothers.

These flowers will be placed at home, on table or sideboard, in double memory of American soldiers gone and American soldiers in arms.

Final Appeal

The Metropolitan-Boston Campaign Committee has only this to urge as a final appeal:

Do not feel that your obligation to give has been cancelled because no one has solicited your contribution.

We are not begging; we are simply trying to point out a patriotic duty and an opportunity of doing it.

Do not find yourself saying, after this drive is over: "I intended to contribute but did not get around to it."

And finally, if the "still small voice" says to you who have already given: "You could have given more," heed its reproach.

Draw your check NOW; make it out to the Second Red Cross War Fund, and send it to Allan Forbes, Treasurer, Metropolitan Boston Committee, 125 Milk Street, Boston, or to the First National Bank, Boston.

DON'T MISS GAME AT FENWAY

Attraction: Red Sox Vs. White Sox—Object: Red Cross Fund—Everybody Up!

By NICK FLATLEY.

Baseball was to do its bit for the Red Cross today.

The entire receipts from the game between the league-leading Red Sox and the world's champion White Sox were to be handed over to the "Greatest Mother."

A splendid addition to the big fund was assured, though thousands, who had planned to help by attending yesterday's purposed contest, could not get out to the ball yard.

But the fact that the game was for charity, in addition to the pleasing knowledge that this particular clash of the Sox is providing the great baseball excitement we've had around here for some time, set the stage for one of the biggest days of the year.

ROWLAND NOT WORRYING.

Clarence Rowland, who manages the hostiles, is certain his team will come through in the race. He rates his Sox much better than ours, even though he has watched a couple of games go by the board in heetic finishes. He's within shooting distance of the front and, except maybe for the pitching, his champions look just as good as they did a year ago.

It's early in the season, as Clarence sees things, and he's perfectly contented so long as he isn't being distanced to any appreciable extent.

Manager Barrow of the local heroes, is likewise optimistic. The surprising loss of Battering Babe Ruth hasn't stopped the machinery of his outfit the least little bit and, incidentally, has proved that the Sox are not at all a one-man team. This, together with the very pleasing pitching debut of Samuel Jones, Esq., makes the future appear very rosate to the former mogul of the late International.

Edward Cicotte, formerly of here, whose famous shine ball hasn't seen him any games yet this season, was jerked in office another attempt to get onto the winning side of the book.

CICOTTE VS. LEONARD.

Eddie has lost six in a row, but most of them were tough ones. He naturally expects to get a change very shortly. Which is a popular wish hereabouts, provided the turn doesn't come today.

Dutch Leonard, who was slammed somewhat viciously by the Indians on his last mound appearance, had the Boston end of the job, the experts casts. Hubert's wing, according to camp reports, is strengthening, and he might as well pick the champions to evidence it.

The game was to start at 3:15, with regular prices and no war tax. Every cent taken in goes to the Red Cross. Every fan is helping along the country's greatest war fund by journeying out to watch two of the best teams in the game have it out.

It's one of the best ways of boosting a grand cause we know of.

At 6 P. M. Bumkin Island and Radio School Outfits Line Up on Braves Field

All followers of the national game will watch with interest the innovation of twilight baseball, which is to be tried out today on Braves Field when the Harvard Radio School and Bumkin Island teams meet in a game scheduled to start at 6 o'clock.

The encounter will be preceded by an hour's concert, rendered by the Bumkin Island Station naval band of forty men, who will come up the harbor with the ball players in a special boat.

The game will be free to everybody, as there is the keenest sort of rivalry existing between the two teams, a red-hot contest is anticipated.

Radio School has won eight straight games, its record having been nicked only by Camp Devens, while the Bumkin Islanders have emerged victorious in all their diamond battles.

UP TO NEHF TO STOP BEZDEK'S BEST BET

Pittsburgh, May 27.—The Braves, equally as "chesty" this trip as they were in 1914 when they came from nowhere in the National League race and buzzed through their field to nine and fortune, were to renew hostilities with the Pirates on Forbes Field this afternoon.

Rain prevented the matinee Saturday, and incidentally cast the rival producers, Percy D. Haughton and Barney Dreyfuss, an old-fashioned bulky "house." It was the second big gate the Braves have lost in the West this trip, rain also drowning them out of their Sunday date in Chicago.

The Stallings crew is entering the series from the Cubs and Cardinals and breaking even with Christie Mathewson's Reds in four games, got off to a flying start here, bagging Friday's pastime in decisive fashion. The teams battle today and bring their current series to a close tomorrow.

Then the Braves leave for Brooklyn for a four-game series with the Dodgers. Magnate Ebbets has informed Stallings that he plans putting on two games in the afternoon Decoration Day, instead of splitting up the holiday bill, per custom. The Dodgers have had a very bogus Western trip, and Ebbets evidently figures he will attract a bigger crowd by staging a double-header.

For today's game on Forbes Field Arthur Nehf and Wilbur Cooper, two of the best southpaws in the National League, were carded to have it out. A tight battle was in the offing.

Yesterday the Braves ran over to Dayton, O., and won an exhibition game, 3-2. Hughie Canavan did the scoring and kept the energy in his well scattered. Joe Kelly, with two doubles and a single, was the hitting star. Herzog and Red Smith were given a day off by Stallings.

Pitcher Tom Hughes has rejoined the tribe. He had his inning right whip examined by "Honesetter" Reese at Cincinnati, discovering that he had a misplaced ligament. It was jerked back into place.

Reese told Hughes to take it easy for the next two weeks, assuring him that he then would be able to cut loose his fastest.

Holiday Game for Tars

IN CORBETT'S CORNER

by James J. Corbett

"Some folks insist that at last Ty Cobb is slowing up. It's the same crowd that said the very same thing back in 1914 and has been repeating it every season since then. It is unlikely, however, that 1918 will witness Ty's "end" as a star.

Cobb just now is batting somewhat below his normal mark—but that is but natural for Cobb in the Springtime. The batting terror has been starting rather slowly during the past few seasons, biding his time until all the chill is gone from the air and it is warm enough to banish the danger of "Charley horse"—and then Tyrus Raymond cuts loose in the old fashioned way.

Cobb is nearing his thirty-second birthday now and is somewhat bulkier than in the days when he first flashed into view along the American League horizon.

Perhaps he cannot move with all the speed of yore, but he has gained in experience through the years, and that more than offsets the handicap of extra poundage.

Cobb knows the weakness and the strength of every catcher, every pitcher and every player in the circuit—and he uses that knowledge to aid him in racing around the sacks with the home plate as his goal.

SECRET OF HITTING.

As to hitting—well, this is how Ty explained it some time ago:

"In my earlier days I never gave much thought to placing hits. I'd just step up and bang them, trusting that I could pole them to safe territory in the outfield or beat the ball in the race to first if I smashed it at an infielder.

"Now I'm doing it a little differently. I've come to the realization that it's time to conserve some energy and so I've been schooling myself in the knack of "hitting 'em where they ain't."

Those who feel that Cobb shows signs of slipping perhaps will encounter the same surprise in October of 1918 as they did in 1915, 1916 and 1917.

In those years they insisted—as they do now—that Cobb was going back; that the brilliance of the brightest star that baseball has seen for more than a decade is fading; that how grave was their error in prophecy!

BEATEN OUT BY SPEAKER.

Cobb cracked out 208 hits in 1915 and batted .370, which gave him the highest major league average for the year. Also he stole 96 bases, which is the greatest number of pilfers by any big leaguer in more than twenty years, and scored 144 runs.

In 1916 Cobb was forced to surrender the batting crown to Tris Speaker, even though he hit for .371. But he made 201 hits in that year, led his league in run scoring with 113 and also was the circuit leader in total bases with sixty-eight.

In 1917 Cobb came back with a clubbing average of .383 which led both leagues, amassed a splendid total of 225 hits, his rivals in stolen bases with fifty-five and was second in run scoring.

The Old Timers will compete in the first fifty, with gold and silver buttons going to the winner and runner-up. In addition, twelve cups will be awarded the high guns in the long event.

FRANK BAKER SWATS WAY INTO FANCY FOUR; SMITH IN .400 COLONY

Home Run Baker made four hits in as many times at bat in the Cleveland matinee and went into fourth place in the American League batting averages.

Dubert registered a pair of hits and moved into fourth place in the National League. The rival big fives:

GOSSIP OF GLOVELAND
By J. P. MURPHY

UNABLE TO secure a match for Joe Gans, Young Corbett of New Bedford, the former champion, will box Joe Mandot, Lowell lightweight, in his card for tomorrow night. The bouts promise to consist of a twelve, two tens and an eight.

* * *

THE TWELVE-ROUNDER will bring together Terry Carroll, New Bedford welterweight champion, and Tommy Maguire, aggressive Philadelphia boy, who has been showing some good things style at the Douglas A. C. two weeks ago, with Thomas gaining the award, although many believed it should have gone to Maguire.

* * *

BENNY McCOY, Fall River bantamweight, a member of Leo F. Flynn's stable, will engage Patsy Green of Providence in the ten-round semi-final. Another ten will have as contestants Frankie Hayes of Newark, N. J., and Willie Meyers of New York. Bill Casey of South Boston and Joe Rosario, said hitting Franklin boy, will produce the initial number at eight rounds.

ENCOURAGED by his success in recent bouts, Kid Henry, Jasky Newark, N. J., scrapper, is now anxious to have it out with Al Norbert of New Bedford, at 122 pounds, ringside. Tony Palmolis, Henry's pilot, is also clearing to pair Henry with Young Chakes of Manchester, N. H. The latter match, if made, will be staged at the Commercial A. C.

* * *

TOMMY ELM of Paterson, N. J., will box Virginia Rosain of the United States Army at a bouout somker at his home town Wednesday night. Elm has also offered his services for a Red Cross carnival, to be held in the same city in the near future.

* * *

THE PATERSON boxer is eager to try conclusions with anybody in New England at 130 pounds. Young Buckler of South Boston and Young (Sailor) Sacco of East Boston prefer Jack Hayes, Fall River pilot, but he is ready to post a $200 forfeit to bind his battler to any agreement that is made.

* * *

BUZZY, BY the way, has come to the front with a suggestion that is worthy of the serious consideration of every Daily fistic fan in Boston. He would have promoted a gigantic "Battle Royal" for the benefit of either the Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Fund or Red Cross. Buzzy is quite sure that if the proper parties took hold they could raise a handsome sum for either of the funds, and, at the same time, put the boxing game in the Hub back on its former high plane.

* * *

BILL ANDERSON, Somerville's noted barrel-tosser, has dug up a new champion, and will exhibit him shortly at one of the local clubs. Bill has not yet been able to discover his right name, but he vouches for his gameness and fighting ability. Said champion earns a livelihood by tossing around carts, or something, at the fish pier, claims Anderson.

* * *

JOE MELANSON, East Boston amateur, is thinking seriously of entering the professional division. Bellow Sacco will probably be his first foe on the turn-over.

CARD AT DOUGLAS A. C.

Final: Mike McGeary of Watertown, vs. Kid Patton of Chelsea, 10 rounds.

Semi-final: Billy Carney of New Bedford, vs. Walter Bartlett of Lawrence, 10 rounds.

Preliminary: Bobby Dyson of New Bedford, vs. Al Thomas of New Bedford, 10 rounds.

Curtain-Raiser: Archie McDonald of Chelsea, vs. Kid Bradley of Charlestown, 8 rounds.

Starting Time: 8 p. m.

By J. P. MURPHY.

Three ten-round bouts and an eight will constitute tonight's boxing card at the Douglas A. C., Chelsea. Young Bonner drew out of his match with Barney Snyder, and Manager Jack Leonard was quick to book the best program possible.

Leonard's card should embrace plenty of action. Mike McGeary of Charlestown and Kid Patton of Chelsea, two 130-pounders, who know how to hit, if a trifle shy on science, will hook up in the final event.

Walter Bartlett of Lawrence and Billy Carney of New Bedford, two welterweights, who always deliver, are to meet again, while the ten-rounder will be rendered by Knocky Bobby Dyson and Al Thomas, two speed marvels from New Bedford.

The eight-round curtain-raiser will bring together Archie McDonald of Chelsea and Kid Bradley of Charlestown. Manager Leonard announced that the reduced scale of assessments going into effect at tonight's show and will remain in vogue throughout the Summer.

Manager McKirdy at the Commercial A. C. has completed his menu for Thursday night. Here it is:

Dave Powers o. Malden vs. Walter Butler of Revere, ten rounds; Charley De Angelos of Revere vs. Dan McCormack of East Boston, ten rounds; Billy Woods of Manchester, N. H., vs. Kid Henry of Newark, N. J., ten rounds, and Sam Bell of Boston vs. Eddie Flynn of Peabody, eight rounds.

McKirdy is confident that he has booked four classy set-tos, and claims he will be proven the poorest sort of a prophet if there isn't plenty doing at the West End Plastic plant.

WALTER REHG CALLED; PLANS TO ENTER NAVY

Walter Rehg, one of George Stallings' best outfielders, current form considered, has been notified he has twenty days to enlist in either branch of the service he selects, when he will be obliged to report to the draft board at his home city, Wichita, Kas. Rehg plans to enter the navy when the Braves return to Boston a week hence, it is reported from Pittsburgh. Walter was married the past Winter.

CRIMSON CREW MAY SHATTER OLD MARK

Haines' Eight Has Chance in Final Reckoning for College Rowing Honors

By DR. WALTER PEET.

Through the simple process of elimination one more big varsity crew has been dropped out by the wayside—or, rather, by the lakeside.

Cornell was the latest victim of the unrelenting process, when Princeton's plucky boys won on Lake Carnegie.

Thus, at the present writing it is practically a dead heat between the Ithacans and the Ellis for last place.

It is not generally known that just three weeks ago, when John Collyer, Cornell's undertaker, arrived at Cayuga Lake, he and Courtney decided that the old rowing men were so sure of their nests in the boat that they had severely expelled the coach and did not half try in their work. The result was that the younger and inexperienced men could hold them in trial races, whereupon Courtney and Collyer fired the whole bunch and depended on the youngsters.

"VETS" MAY HAVE HELPED.

Perhaps the Cornellians could have slipped a few over on the Lake Cayuga course a bit faster if they had had two or three of the older and more experienced oarsmen.

Nevertheless, Cornell brought Princeton a good crew physically, rigged remarkably well and rowing the typical Courtney stroke.

The Ithacans were simply raced to a standstill by John Fitzpatrick's game lads, who were full of fight.

Harvard has a chance to be in the final reckoning for supremacy in the year's university row for, but, because of the fact that Pennsylvania ran away from Yale so easily, the Crimson now will have to give the Elis a most decisive defeat to have a legitimate claim for rating near the top.

CHANCE FOR CREWS.

Harvard-Penn's big Harvard combination is said to be traveling very fast and bids fair to come pretty near the two-mile record next Saturday on the Connecticut River course at Derby, which is considered very fast.

Professor Mather Abbot has made some changes in the rig of the Yale varsity boat, and has decidedly improved the form of his men. Thus, undoubtedly, the Elis will put in much better account of themselves than they did in their race against Pennsylvania on the Schuylkill.

William A. Meiklejohn, a former wrestling Columbia crew captain, will referee the Yale-Harvard race for the twenty-third consecutive time.

SCHOOL RELAY TEAMS CLASH ON TECH FIELD

JACKSON DECLARES HE'S THROUGH WITH BASEBALL

Wilmington, Del., May 27.—Joe Jackson, formerly of the Chicago White Sox, announced today that he is done with professional baseball.

"It makes no difference when the war ends," Joe said, "I shall not attempt to go back to ball playing or make a living. I intend to make my home here and to following the trade of shipbuilding."

He says he applied to the shipbuilding plant here two months ago for a job, that Manager Rowland knew it, and that Rowland also knew he was to leave the team while it was in the East.

SUNDAY BALL BACKED UP FULLERTO...

Noted Baseball Expert Military Authorities U... East to Take It U...

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Sunday baseball in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Washington may come within the next few days and turn the tide to several additional games.

That Pittsburgh will play baseball Sunday within a short time, as an experiment at Washington promises success, as it seems to have already is certain.

The baseball powers, in unity, the military authorities are working for Sunday baseball as a relief to the crowded condition of the majority of the Eastern cities.

It is probable that within a short time the military power will request the local authorities in Boston, New York and Philadelphia to allow big league teams to play ball on Sunday so as to give the munitions, ship yards and other workers, as well as soldiers and sailors, a chance for recreation.

IT'S O. K. IN WASHINGTON.

The opening of Washington to Sunday baseball is the biggest move in favor of rescinding the old rules that has yet been made and the orderly and enthusiastic crowd that witnessed the first game proved that baseball can be played in the East on Sunday with as little disorder as it has been played for years in the West.

Years ago I took up the question of Sunday baseball and investigated its effect upon communities.

Francis O'Neill, then Chief of Police of Chicago, told me that forty or fifty thousand would be added to men and boys at a ball game and that 20,000 would be required to keep the same men in order if they were scattered through pool rooms, saloons and other places.

He voluntarily made records showing the number of arrests of boys and young men on Sunday when games were being played and those on which no games were scheduled and his figures showed that the arrests for minor offenses were less than one per cent. when the games were playing than when they were not.

MAY BE NO PROTEST.

The overcrowded condition of the Eastern cities and the change of sentiment due to the playing of Sunday baseball in the West without protest and in New York, at least, it would be a great relief to the thousands of strangers who have no place to go on Sunday.

Likewise it would be a blessing to the ball players who are suffering from lack of patronage.

Having sized up all the major league clubs thus far as they appear in the field, rather being trimmed and crippled by the year and by holdouts, the following table may be of interest:

This Day in Our History

THIS is the anniversary of the colonists' attack on the Pequods in 1637. Settlers from Hartford and Windsor burned their wigwams, killed 600 in battle and broke them up as a tribe in retaliation for endless acts of hostility on the part of the Indians.

Millions of Holes

NINE hundred and ninety-seven tools are required in manufacturing a modern rifle. In one rifle ninety-four holes must be drilled. Shrapnel, torpedoes, machine guns, biplanes, motor trucks and anti-aircraft guns require from seventy to 5,000 holes each.

orry Is Lost Energy

IT LEADS THE WAY TO FAILURE

y Beatrice Fairfax

best way to fail is to think are going to—to imagine rself unsuccessful — to y is lost energy. It travels, never arrives anywhere at cannot keep Monday from after Sunday—but it will unday in agitating itself t fact.

ntrate your mind on your he or the pain in your tooth throb of your cut finger and ow pitilessly your suffering perform to order. Agitate self over how you are going eet the payment on your vic- and, whatever tune it plays, will hear "I owe $10." How am ing to get it before Tuesday? Debt! Worry!"

rry Destructive

Worry is completely destructive. glad heart truly goes the whole day long, while the sad one tires in a mile. Worry never acts as a tonic. Instead, it conducts itself like a sleeping potion.

Helen Olson forged from an $8 a week "job" to a $35 "position," the end of the years in the business world. From clerk in the bargain basement to ribbon buyer.

"I don't know how Helen does it," one of the other girls told me. "She's the most light-hearted girl you ever knew. Never takes anything seriously, never gets nervous or flurried, or seems to realize how much depends on her.

"Doesn't she take any interest in the work?" I asked.

"Interest? Oh, yes, but she never settles down to the seriousness of it—doesn't seem to worry about her responsibility — why, I remember once, when the Christmas rush was on, and we used to have to stay until 10 or 11 at night and be back at 8:30 in the morning, a terrible blizzard came up. Helen lived way out in Westchester, and it didn't look to me as if she'd get home much before 1 in the morning. I spoke to her about it around 9 o'clock. And what do you think she answered? 'All right, Mary, it may take me an hour to travel home, or even a couple of them, but I'm not going to start my floundering through snowdrifts right here in the store.' You can just see she didn't have much sense of responsibility, can't you?"

What I can "just see" is that Helen Olson didn't let her imagination run away with her.

Have you ever waked up in the middle of the night, heard a creaking board and manufactured for yourself out of it a burglar—armed, ready to slay? Two hours of cold chills, horror, agony, sleeplessness—and all because you let your imagination run away with you.

Spurs Imagination

That's what worry does—it spurs imagination and lets it run away with you.

Worry never gets up and "hustles"; it never does one constructive thing about arranging a better state of affairs than the one it is tormenting itself about; it never inaugurates a finely destructive policy about chopping down the woods that may hold robbers and thieves—it just runs about like a frantic squirrel in a cage.

"For all the troubles under the sun "There is a cure—or there is none; If there is one, try to find it— If there is none, never mind it."

There is the whole anti-worry policy in a neat and meaty little nutshell.

"They're Behind Us at HOME, Old Boy!"

By NELL BRINKLEY

"FOR they're put the Second War Fund for the Red Cross over the TOP! And your Pals will get this haven too, when they're put out!"

Can't you hear them saying that over there?

The Red Cross is the Heart's blood of Columbia—a deep, strong, tender, healing stream from us in America to feed the veins of our Boys in France who first gave their blood for us. Are you going to give your bit to keep that haven behind the lines with the flaming cross over its immmerable doorways, going strong? If you do, hands more capable than yours, hands of strength and genius and wisdom and will, with all the tenderness that you would lavish if you could, added on, will do what you would do and infinitely more!

America is you and I and our brothers. What we do is what America does. We love this country of ours with something that is unexplainable, something that bursts the heart in its effort to speak—but money can do it this time!

So speak, to the Red Cross Second War Fund. Help put it over the top and make America as splendid as you brag she is—"behind her boys in France with every heart and penny she owns."—NELL BRINKLEY.

Women in War Work

By ELIZABETH ELLAM

WOMEN desiring to do government work, war work, or work in munitions factories must realize that they must have certain qualifications before they are available. For instance, the girl who wants to enroll with a telephone unit for overseas service, must know how to read, write and to speak French, as well as to be a proficient operator.

The woman who desires to fit herself for telegraphy should at least have a knowledge of spelling and grammatical construction, and it is advisable that she know the touch system of typewriting, otherwise she will be obliged to learn it at the school. The only other requirements are that you spell correctly.

To L. M. T. of Edgewood, R. I.: I am not publishing your letter, for obvious reasons. I believe, however, if you will write to the National Metal Trades Association, No. 166 Devonshire street, Boston, you will secure the information that you desire. State exactly what you want, and your qualifications, and the factory equipment that you have.

Mrs. M. A. H.—Chicopee Falls—You neglected to send the stamped addressed envelope necessary for a personal reply is asked of this department. If you will forward it, I will try to help you.

Mrs. Ella F. C—— of Hudson street, Boston. I cannot give you any real help unless you tell me what you are capable of doing. If you have any qualifications, you might apply to the State Free Employment Bureau at 8 Kneeland street for work.

Of Special Interest

Here is a letter that is of especial interest:

Dear Miss Ellam:

Please tell me where I could put in an application as a telephone operator for the government. I have had two and a half years' experience, and am very anxious to find out how to go about it. An early reply would be appreciated. MISS I. G.

Willimantic, Ct.

If you will make application to W. P. Emery, Room 711, No. 50 Oliver street, Boston, who has charge of enrollment for New England, your application will be given attention. I understand that all present requirements of the government have been filled, to date, but others applying are being filed, and will be given a chance when the next call comes.

For ordering service Mr. Emery requires that an applicant not only speaks French, but reads and writes it as well. A proficient operator also is desired.

Fit Yourself

Make ready for that time. Fit yourself now, while you have the opportunity. Be ready to be one of the efficient ones, when it comes your turn to get into the game.

Letters today follow:

Dear Miss Ellam: I am anxious to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the Western Union to become telegraphy. Am employed fifty-two hours a week in a shoe factory and am willing to stay, but if there is an evening school, perhaps I could attend that. I have only a common grammar school education. Would that make any difference?

E. M.

Marlboro.

If you will apply to the Western Union School at No. 140 Congress street, you will be able to make arrangements for study. I believe that it is possible to fit your lessons to the leisure that you have, as most of those studying are employed. It is advisable that you know the touch system of typewriting, otherwise you will be obliged to learn it at the school. The only other requirements are that you spell correctly.

To L. M. T. of Edgewood, R. I.: I am not publishing your letter, for obvious reasons. I believe, however, if you will write to the National Metal Trades Association, No. 166 Devonshire street, Boston, you will secure the information that you desire. State exactly what you want, and your qualifications, and the factory equipment that you have.

Mrs. M. A. H.—Chicopee Falls—You neglected to send the stamped addressed envelope necessary for a personal reply is asked of this department. If you will forward it, I will try to help you.

Mrs. Ella F. C—— of Hudson street, Boston. I cannot give you any real help unless you tell me what you are capable of doing. If you have any qualifications, you might apply to the State Free Employment Bureau at 8 Kneeland street for work.

The Course of True Love

IT'S RATHER HARD TO HEAD IT OFF

By Cynthia Jackson.

ANNABELLE LEE and Gregory Davidson walked into the small country church together just before the evening service. It must have been Annabelle's kid brother Charley, who never missed anything, who saw them first and gave the alarm to the remaining three members of Lawyer Lee's family, who were all scrambling together in the Lee pew, and each one turned in quick succession to verify the report of the kid brother.

Then Aunt Margaret, the unattached female relative of Banker Davidson's family, who never missed more than Charley Lee, turned and sapled Annabelle and Gregory, and she at once started the same undulating movement in the Davidson pew.

The minister gave as his text, "The Love That Passeth Understanding," but as far as the occupants of the Lee family pew and the Davidson family pew were concerned he might just as well have chosen, "Oh, That We Two Were Maying." The entrance of Annabelle Lee and Gregory Davidson together was just the same as a declaration of war, and the members of the Davidson family were too busy mobilizing their forces to bother about texts. At once, automatically, the family councils were called for the following morning.

Four or five members of the Lee family filed into breakfast the next morning in solemn manner, showing evidence of having passed a restless, sleepless night. Annabelle alone looked fresh and happy and slipped in as merrily as if breakfast were a midnight supper instead of being the solemn mournful function that it is.

Mr. Lee did not even glance at his newspaper. He barely tasted his coffee. From his remarks one gathered that us there was only one bank in their town and as Davidson owned that bank, he would draw his money out and take it to the neighboring town of X—— and place it in safe hands.

Mrs. Lee remarked that no wonder poor Mrs. Davidson looked old and worn before her time. Anyone could see that Gregory was inclined to be wild and was going to cause her no end of trouble and worry.

Mary, Annabelle's older sister, who [illegible] that when a girl hasn't any deeper subject on her mind than beaux, it's no wonder she cares so little with when she is seen in public and for her part she thought it about time Annabelle was sent to a boarding school to learn something.

Then Charley, dear brother Charley, remarked with a look at Annabelle that was intended to be significant, that he noticed that one fellow in that there town was beginning to part his hair in the middle, and he guessed he had to do it to keep his brains balanced.

Then the Lee family filed out of the breakfast room again in the same solemn fashion, and even Annabelle looked solemn, too, as she followed them out.

About the same time a similar scene was going on in the Davidson dining room. Grandmother Davidson remarked that in her day no she girl thought of attending church unless she sat in her father's pew; that for her part she was very thankful that she didn't have to live around any of these mighty young girls and be responsible for their bringing up.

Aunt Margaret bridled up slightly at this last remark, but in order not to lose the main thread of the argument she said that the taste of young men these days was beyond her. They would pass by the well-behaved, modest, retiring, well-brought-up kind and take up with silly, giggling girls who never gave a thought beyond whether their nose was as white as marshmallow.

Mr. Davidson looked severely at his only "son, Gregory. "Young man, it occurs to me you are not making much headway in my bank. I can get a $10 a week clerk to do all the work you are doing. What you need is a wider experience in a bigger bank. I am going to write to the City National in Q—— and see if they haven't an opening for you."

"But, father," began poor Gregory. "I—I don't want to go to Q——. I am perfectly satisfied where I am. If you don't want me in the bank I can find something else to do. I'm sure mother wouldn't want me to go," appealing to his mother.

"Your father knows what is best for you," piously responded Mrs. Davidson to the appealing look in [illegible]

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

He Should Inform Her.

My fiance, before he met me, used to know a girl in his school. Last June she invited him to her graduation, in a letter, which showed she still hoped to win him back. I forced him to go, as I felt sorry for the girl. Even now she shows she would like to have him back.

Once I felt sorry for her, but now I am beginning to think that she must be very foolish. Ought I to write her a note, saying we are engaged? (Our engagement has not been announced.) JOY.

IN mercy to this silly girl, your fiance should write her a little note telling her that as an old friend he wants her to be one of the first to know of his great happiness in his engagement. Perhaps she does not deserve this consideration, but I am sure you are generous enough to want to save her from hurt and putting herself in absurd and humiliating positions. You are not the one to tell her; he is.

It Won't Do!

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three and fond of a man fifteen years my senior. I have accepted an engagement ring from him. I have given myself a trial in which I thought during that time I would be able to learn to love him, but I have not succeeded in doing so. He has proposed marriage to me and wants to be married within two months, but I do not know what to do. Do you think that I would be doing wrong by giving him up? WORRIED.

JUST exactly what you are hesitating about no practical person can see. You don't love the man and you find that your ideas and ideals differ very much. Now, how under the sun are you going to make him happy or find happiness for yourself? The greatest wrong you can do him is to marry him. Tell him the truth—it may hurt. But one quick stab is better than the endless nagging, pricking wounds of loveless, uncongenial days.

For Growing Youngsters

ATTRACTIVE MADE-OVER FROCKS

By Rita Stuyvesant

THESE warm days bring out cool frocks, and especially for the children. When mother takes out last Summer's ginghams and chambrays she often finds that they are much too small for her growing daughter. Since the government is asking us to conserve everything, even material, the thrifty mother will begin now to make over the children's school frocks rather than buy new ones.

There are so many simple styles for juveniles this season that "made over" frocks are often more attractive than new ones. Plain styles are popular this year and furnish an excellent way to remodel dresses.

A tan plaid gingham school frock for a girl of ten was found to be too small for her after last Summer's wear. Her wise mother cut the waist from the skirt and made an Eton blouse of pumpkin-colored linen, buttoned in back with tiny pearl buttons. The gingham skirt was raised up a bit and fastened to the Eton under a deep tuck. A white piqué Buster Brown collar was used on the blouse and a black silk tie added for smartness. The skirt was lengthened by a three-inch band of linen. Only one yard of new material was needed for this pretty frock, which could not be duplicated for several dollars in any good shop.

Another practical way to make over a frock for a girl about twelve is by making a sleeveless jumper to wear over the old frock. Cut the dress off at the hip line. Make a semi-fitting lining of coarse cotton muslin or any white material on hand. In this waist lining sew back the sleeves. From some plain material of contrasting color cut a sleeveless jacket reaching well below the hips and trim in collar, pockets, etc.) with the material of the waist. To the front opening of the jacket fasten a shield, add a belt, and you will have a very smart little up-to-date frock at a small cost.

Rest House for Government Employes

Central High School, Washington, D. C., has been formally opened as a community center, where it is expected every week from 20,000 to 30,000 government employes from all parts of the United States will be able to take advantage of the facilities for rest and recreation.

Secretary of War Baker made the request that the large civilian population, which the war has brought to the Capital, should be taken care of in community centres. As a result of this request and as an outcome of the work started in 1914 by Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, and carried on by Miss Cecil Norton, co-operation has been established between this work and the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Knights of Columbus, and other organizations doing service along similar lines.

Central High School, recently completed at a cost of $1,500,000, is said to be the best equipped in the country. It's two gymnasiums, large swimming pool, outdoor and indoor running tracks, and drill hall, which can be used for dancing and tennis courts, will be at the disposal of the various clubs formed by the civilians and soldiers welcomed here by the community centre workers.

Are You Ashamed of Your Hands?

It is an old saying that a woman's hands tell her age and social standing better than her face. There is no excuse for any woman to have rough, red, coarse hands, no matter how much housework she may do. Specialists has perfected a preparation that keeps the hands wonderfully soft and youthfully white. It is called La-may (French Creme L'amie), and enough for weeks for only a few cents from any of the big stores. All you do is to apply it after you wash your hands or before you go outdoors. You will be delighted to see the quick improvement in your hands. It is also splendid for the complexion, for rough skin, wrinkles, crows' feet and enlarged pores. Thousands of women say La-may is the most wonderful beauty-creator they ever used. It is guaranteed not to grow hair. There is also a delightful La-may Face Powder that is guaranteed absolutely pure and that stays on better than any other face powder. Save this notice.

EXHAUSTION OF NERVES

Dr. Belden Writes of Real and False Neurasthenia

By Brice Belden, M. D.

ROUGHLY speaking, there are two kinds of neurasthenia. One of these might be called true neurasthenia and is taken seriously by the medical profession. The other is a more or less false neurasthenia and is not taken seriously.

Neurasthenia is a very common affection and may be defined as a state of chronic nervous fatigue, the symptoms being due to the exhaustion of the nervous system.

In true neurasthenia, which generally occurs in males between the ages of twenty and fifty, there is apt to be a hereditary strain, the individual being derived from stock of essentially deficient stamina. The earlier it occurs the more likely the hereditary weakness.

Confining occupations, close attention to detail, anxiety, great concentration, and assumption of responsibilities too heavy for the individual to bear, predispose to neurasthenia.

Emotional excitability favors the development of neurasthenia. A combination of overwork with insufficient rest and worry is a common cause. Injudicious or unhygienic living may play a part. Intestinal poisoning sometimes figures as a factor. The affection is very apt to develop in those predisposed after influenza.

The true neurasthenic suffers from some or all of the following symptoms: Depression of spirits, inability to concentrate the mind, insomnia, vertigo, headache, irronchitness, introspection, various fears (as crowds, closed spaces, darkness, etc.), pain in the back, spots of tenderness along the spine, weakness of the extremities, marked prostration after moderate exertion, numbness and tingling sensations and neuralgia pains in various parts of the body, loss of appetite, coated tongue, indigestion, palpitation, distress in the region of the heart, cold extremities and pulsating sensations in the upper abdomen.

We have given a picture of a genuine neurasthenic. He is really ill and his symptoms are real. He requires as close attention and skilful treatment as a case of typhoid fever.

But what about the false neurasthenic?

The false neurasthenic is an utterly selfish individual with a morbid characteristic, a craving for maudlin sympathy, a dash of hysteria, a tendency to pose, a worthless economic status although usually prosperous (not a real producer and devoid of any talent), and boundless energy.

It is the boundless energy that gives him away. He overacts the part. Consequently we find him resorting to all sorts of exertions that would exhaust a normal man. He exercises. He may take three or four Turkish or Russian baths a week, swim a great deal, play strenuously with the medicine ball, run, ride and adopt a reducing diet.

He takes a new medicine every week, sometimes prescribed by the doctor, quite sometimes recommended by condoling friends. He is strong on advertised articles claiming to possess wonderful nerve tonic and restorative properties as regards the nervous system, though really of far lower value than many fresh foods.

The false neurasthenic is a standing proof of Professor William James's doctrine that human beings usually possess a vast store of reserve energy not ordinarily drawn upon. But instead of tapping his available resources for high purposes he simply dissipates them in the interest of a morbid selfishness.

BIG TOP DEFIES RAIN; CIRCUS IS WITH US

Barnum & Bailey's Scintillating Spectacle Shows Twice Daily in Huntington Avenue

The "Big Top" defies the weather man.

Barnum & Bailey's circus, which has pitched its tented city on the convenient Huntington avenue show grounds, began its week in Boston with a matinee at 2 o'clock.

The waterproof canvas of the huge tents and liberal use of straw on the ground made comfortable housing and footing for the audience. Tonight's performance begins at 8 o'clock. The "doors" are open an hour before the time for the hippodrome program.

The street parade scheduled for today was postponed on account of the rain. It will be held tomorrow, weather permitting, over the route previously announced.

The circus will play twice daily. The advent of circus week has, as usual, hurled the young person of Greater Boston into a fever of excited interest, while many an elder feels the return of the old-time circus thrill. But the parents, however eager they may be, are apt to camouflage a bit. Witness the man who explains: "Oh, yes, I'm going to the circus to take the children." Foxy father! He uses the children as his alibi.

Features of this 1918 model of the B. & B. circus include Palien's bears, which skate, ride bicycles, do wire-walking and other "stunts" singular for bears. The Imperial Siegrist-Silbon troupe of acrobats; Sig. Bagonghi, the funny dwarf-equestrian; Orrin and Davenport, premier equestrians; Bird Millman, the "fairy on the cobweb"; the riding Hannafords and other super-acts enrich the bill. The show begins with the great spectacle, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp."

And the clowns, a battalion of them, each one more absurd than the other.

AMERICAN-ADVERTISER MEN AID RED CROSS

The Boston AMERICAN, the Boston ADVERTISER and their employes have raised so far $2,100.02 as the combined "office" subscription to the Red Cross in the present drive.

The employes' subscriptions represent all departments of the two newspapers, editorial, mechanical, clerical, circulation and so on through the various arts and crafts that are required in the making and distribution of a metropolitan paper.

In the great majority of cases the employes' subscriptions to the combined "office" contribution were really additional subscriptions. Nearly all the members of the AMERICAN and ADVERTISER families had contributed to the district funds which were raised for the Red Cross in their home communities. With them it was literally a case of "He gives twice who gives quickly," for they were quick to contribute and they did so twice.

It is pleasant, in this connection, to recall that in the great Red Cross membership drive of last year, many memberships were recorded from the AMERICAN and ADVERTISER building at No. 82 Summer street.

The same gratifying record holds for the employes of the two newspapers in the Liberty Loan drives. They bought Liberty Bonds as follows:

First Loan	$23,500
Second Loan	15,650
Third Loan	26,500
Total	$65,300

The tale holds one more form of patriotism—the supreme one. A big service flag flies from the front of the AMERICAN and ADVERTISER building. It bears fifty-six blue stars.

DINNER WILL BE GIVEN VISITING ADVERTISERS

For the entertainment of some of the most prominent advertising men of the country, members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies who will be here tomorrow, the Pilgrim Publicity Association has arranged a dinner at the American House at 6 o'clock tomorrow night. George W. Coleman, a past president of the association, will speak on "Conditions in France." Other speakers will be Paul E. Faust of Mallory, Mitchell & Faust, Inc., of Chicago, and O. H. Blackman of Blackman, Ross Company, New York, who will talk on advertising. Dinner tickets are on sale at the Pilgrim Publicity Association rooms at $3. The New England Council of the American Association of Advertising Agencies is composed of H. E. Ayres & Co., J. W. Barber Advertising Agency, A. W. Ellis Co., H. B. Humphrey Company, John J. Morgan Advertising Agency, Inc., P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Franklin P. Shumway Company, Walter H. Snow, Walton Advertising & Printing Company, Amsterdam Advertising Agency, J. Walter Thompson Company and George Batten Company. The committee in charge is A. W. Ellis, chairman; P. F. O'Keefe, H. E. Ayres and J. J. Morgan.

CHILDREN'S CARNIVAL AT SHEPARD STORES

Children's Carnival Week at the Shepard stores with a program jammed full of entertainment for the little folk will attract many children from Boston and vicinity. Musical numbers will include a bird whistler from Maine, Hawaiian and Chinese singers, a ukulele orchestra and selections on violin and phonograph.

A one-ring circus, a sure enough menagerie, Mother Goose characters, clowns, an electrical lion and a Punch and Judy show are but a few of the attractions arranged for the children who visit the big store. The carnival will be divided into four daily entertainments beginning at 11 o'clock each morning.

The big attractions will be a moving picture show and a children's cafe. Children should be accompanied by an adult.

REPORT AGAINST INTERVENTION IN RUSSIA

Washington, May 27.—Members of e staff of Ambassador Francis have rived in Washington and are mak- g reports to President Wilson and e State Department, discouraging itary intervention in Russia, par- ularly if intervention must be car- ied out by the Japanese.

hese men believe that Japan's in- ntions are the best in the world and anxiety to intervene in Russia is ed on a desire disinterested Ah to serve the great Allied cause. ost, they say, Japan is more dis- ted in Russia than is any other na- in the world. The United States s a best liked of the allied nations. intervention cannot be carried by the United States, they believe it there might better be none. If pan goes into Siberia, they say it ll immediately drive all Russia to the arms of Germany and thou- ands of Russian men into the Ger- an armies.

The President is carefully scan- ing all of the information submitted by Mr. Francis' returned staff. Upon is data he will largely base his de- rmination of how his pledge to help ussia may be carried out.

TRUCK MAKES CARGO TRIP OF 900 MILES

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

As an illustration of the way motor trucks are taking the place of freight cars the following story from A. J Shorey, manager of the New England Velie Co., is interesting to merchants who have long hauls to make where specific delivery dates are a part of the contract.

"R. C. Everson of Boston, owner of a large Velie truck, started from Boston for Baltimore on May 8 with five tons of explosives for the government, traveling over nine hundred miles in six days," said Mr. Shorey.

"There were three men with the truck and they traveled day and night. Mr. Everson informs F. C. Harrington, manager of the truck department of the New England Velie Company, that the trip without a single accident or slip-up, and further stated that he is ready for similar trips whenever necessary.

"Velie trucks are going to be seen on the road this summer between all the large cities doing the work that our freight cars should be doing, and the trucks will perform this work at less cost and greater convenience for the consignee.

"Mr. Harrington will be glad to give prospective owners the operating costs and the mileage and road conditions and other data if they so desire. He realizes that in the future we are going to see large trains of motor trucks doing intercity freight and express work.

"The Velie owners have proved conclusively that this fruck is the solution for over-road hauling in all conditions. This was proved during the past Winter, which we all know was one of the most severe Winters for a good many years, for Velie trucks certainly stood the test admirably.

"This probably accounts for the fact that many of the well known business houses in and about Boston are buying not one Velie truck, but fleets of them."

MITZI IS HERE IN A NEW BIT OF THRILLS

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Mitzi, the lady Tom Thumb, whose frolics in "Tom Tom" are so pleasantly remembered, has a new play which is likely to be quite as successful as that curious little operetta about a Paris gamin. It is called "Head Over Heels."

The title is to be taken literally for Mitzi turns head over heels in full view of the audience, and also in her head.

In the new piece Mitzi plays the top of the pyramid of the Bambinetti troupe of acrobats. Nine daily thrill the audience which jammed the Tremont theatre Saturday night by indulging in an acrobatic carnival with the troupe, being lifted into the air and spread eagled by them for a very novel finale.

Her entrance shortly after the curtain rises might be termed a trifle out of the ordinary, also. The scene is a lawyer's office. Mitzi desires to consult him, but they have locked her out. So she enters through the transom.

Walter Hartley's story, "Shadows," inspired Lee Arthur to write a comedy on the subject. The piece was little known and the producer took Edgar Allen Woolf is to all intents and purposes a brand new play.

Jerome Kern, who appears to be writing the music for all the musical shows nowadays, found time to supply a lot of tunes for this one. George Marion staged the piece, and plays the important character part of Papa Bambinetti.

As presented Saturday night "Head Over Heels" is in two acts and three scenes. The first two scenes, which occupy three-quarters of the evening, are the best kind of entertainment. The action is rapid and mirthful, the lines sparkle, the songs are clever and inspiringly melodious. Situations are far more nearly original than you find in musical comedies, and Mitzi's piquant personality is utterly irresistible.

The last act flops back to ordinary stupid musical comedy conventions, vapid lines and aimless time killing. No doubt Colonel Henry W. Savage will get after this part of the show with a meat axe.

What is it about, you want to know?

There is a Don Juan sort of person named Edward Sterling, who makes love to Mitzi when the family was turning cart wheels in Barcelona.

Fifty years back in New York the little dreams that the Bambinetti family have come to America to appear in vaudeville, but they have. Oh, yes, they have, and they have hired a press agent, a very fresh, very pushing person named T. Anthony Squibbs, a role which fits Robert Emmett Keane like a rubber glove.

Mitzi finds out that Sterling is a very devilish, but his law partner, Robert Lawson, played by Boyd Marshall, catches her vital organ on the rebound.

At the suggestion of the press agent, Mr. Lawson becomes the Bambinettis' angel, and supplies the funds for a lot of angelic clothes worn by Mitzi in the next scene.

This lawyer's office is a curious sort of a place, anyway. There is a graphophone in one corner, and large quantities of girls troupe out of the various side rooms to perform in a half dozen musical numbers which occur before the scene changes.

The second scene is Mitzi's private suite at the Ritz, where a rehearsal of the Bambinetti troupe is to take place and into which intrudes the same pulchritudinous chorus, apparently never looks her door.

The last act is something which has never been done on the stage before, a charity bazaar—don't shout. That's the scene I'd rather not talk about.

Finally Mitzi marries Lawson. Sterling, the Don Juan, elopes with Ethel because she sang a song "I Am Lonely," and the press agent and Papa Bambinetti get put out.

Colonel Savage has a first class company. Besides the persons already mentioned, Dorothy Mackaye is nice, and so is Edith Allan. Charles E. Wilson as Sterling Carris McManus as a wardrobe mistress, and Thomas Walsh as a butler are all good enough.

There is a modern dance song, "A Funny Little Something," which is condemned to horrible torture by all the jazz bands in the country, and they will probably perpetrate atrocities on "The Moments of the Dance" and "All the World Is Swaying." These are rattling popular airs. Mitzi's "Lullaby" in the hist vtin of Jerome Kern, and beautiful and highly moral in feeling, entitled "A Girl for Each Day in the Week," is sure to please. Scenery and costumes nonpareil.

THIRTEEN FIGHTS NET LEW TENDLER $15,000

To show how fast some of the boxers make money look at Lew Tendler, Philadelphia newsboy lightweight, is reported to have cleaned up over $15,000 in the last eight months. This sum was amassed in thirteen fights.

This Is the Last Day of Big Red Cross Drive

Do Not Let It Pass Without Having Done Your Share

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

The great Red Cross drive will end tonight.

If you have not already contributed, do so TODAY.

You cannot afford NOT to help in this great work.

The Red Cross is supported by voluntary contributions.

But it is just as necessary in war as any other part of our fighting machine.

And if the Red Cross is not efficient, our army will not be efficient.

There should be no question of whether you will give or not.

You should give as a matter of course.

No self-denial is too great to make for so great a cause.

Personally you can do nothing for the men who are so many miles away.

Through the Red Cross you can do everything for them that can be done.

You can help to bring them back to health if they are sick or wounded. You can see that every care is given them.

You can surround them with comforts before and after they go into battle for you.

And you can be sure that it will all be well done, better than you could do it for yourself were you there.

Apply this test to yourself:

If your son or husband or brother were to be injured in a railroad wreck, would you think of expense in getting for him the best possible medical treatment—the best possible care?

Would money considerations stand in your way at all?

You know they would not.

Then do not let them stand in the way now.

Spare no expense to help the Red Cross, which in a few weeks may be helping your son or husband or brother.

Make it your business to see that every facility is at the disposal of this great organization.

Keep in mind what it has done and what it can do with your help.

Today it estimates one hundred million dollars as sufficient for its present needs.

But it will soon need more. It can always use more.

Make this drive more than a success.

Make it exceed the estimate by many millions of dollars.

Really the resources of America have not been touched as yet with all the money that has been raised for the war.

Let everybody give now, and give liberally, that there shall never be a moment when the devoted men and women doing the great work of mercy behind our battlelines need hesitate for fear that their funds will not hold out.

Issue Against Candidacy of Mrs. Pinkham Amusing

Scarcely anything more amusing has occurred recently in this State than the issue which a certain number of suffragettes made against the candidacy of Mrs. Winona O. Pinkham for vice-president. They objected to her on the ground that her husband is a pacifist, and as a pacifist is liable to be disloyal. They feared that he had infected Mrs. Pinkham with some of his disloyal germs.

Now if Mrs. Pinkham had been running for president of an ANTI-suffragist organization, it would not be so amusing, but would be quite natural. If a woman cannot stand on her own feet in a suffragist organization, where can she? If a woman cannot be given the credit of thinking independently in a suffragist organization, where can she? If a woman cannot be considered her husband's equal in a suffragist organization, where can she?

It would be well to put a brake on these attacks upon the loyalty of our fellow-citizens and to beware of the blatant, noisy, self-proclaiming patriots who run about denouncing the patriotism of other people. If you examine their personal records, you are very liable to find that they do not subscribe very much to Liberty Bonds or Red Cross, except talk. Shouting treason at their fellow-citizens is a very cheap way of showing patriotism. With too many of them it is like the pickpocket, who with the bystanders watching their pockets, shouted, "Stop thief!" at another man. The persecution of alleged witches in old Massachusetts, the lynchings, the massacres of Armenians in Turkey and Jews in Russia, all flow from this same cowardly, vicious trait in human character.

NEVER MIND YOUR ANCESTORS—HOW ABOUT YOURSELF?

Just because your ancestors came over in the Mayflower does not make you any better than the person whose forefathers came some years later in steerage.

There were some sheep stealers even on the Mayflower.

Every man should be judged by what he makes of himself.

If a man of humble parentage rises to a great height, the more credit to him.

Ancestry of fame carries with it responsibility.

When you have to say "He comes of a very old family" as a recommendation, the other fellow naturally thinks that the very old family must have deteriorated, or you would not need to speak of it.

Your forebears may have had superior intelligence and high patriotism, but if you do not live up to your lineage and go one better you are far and away behind and below the man who has done just a little bit better than his family before him, no matter how humble.

Not enough credit is given today to the man who has worked himself up.

As a matter of fact, the self-made man must have a streak of the right color or he could not ascend to unusual heights.

All honor to the man or woman who gets there by his or her own efforts.

WIT ENDURES WHEN AGE WITHERS BEAUTY

By Winifred Black

"KNEEL to the wittiest, bow to the prettiest and kiss the one you love best."

Rather a good idea, wasn't it, the old song and the old game? And it's in fashion again—at the new-fashioned, old-fashioned children's parties.

It isn't smart to have dances for children any more, or evening affairs at all. We have gone back to the nice little afternoon party from 2 till 7 with games and some cake and ice cream and a cup of chocolate or a glass of lemonade, and the funny thing about it is that the children have sense enough to like it—especially the boys.

No normal boy likes to dance, anyway. He has too much trouble falling over his feet, and then—when he steps on the girl's slippers and the girl laughs at him!

But the games of "Drop the Handkerchief" and "Kiss in the Ring" and "Spin the Platter"—oh, yes, those are right in his line!

Just to Tease?

I looked in for a minute at one of the new-fashioned, old-fashioned parties yesterday, and they were playing forfeits as sure as you live! And the solemnest kind of an owlish boy was sitting in the middle of the room blindfolded, being the judge! And, just as I came in, he said to the ill-fated lad who stood before him for judgment:

"Kneel to the wittiest, bow to the prettiest, and kiss the one you love best," and the poor lad started out without an instant's hesitation.

He knew the wittiest, and he knew the prettiest, and he knew the one he loved the best. But did he really kiss her? I couldn't help wondering, and from a spark of teasing mischief in his eyes I am afraid he didn't. There wasn't a bit of trouble to guess who loved him the best; she was a tall girl in pink, and her blue eyes flashed fire when he kissed the wrong girl—just to tease her.

The "Wittiest"—I didn't think the wittiest girl looked at all pleased.

The "Prettiest" girl bridled and tossed her head, and grew just a little bit vainer, and the one he pretended to love the best blushed and sighed and wished—what?

Which Do You Choose?

Poor "Wittiest"—you could tell by looking at her that she would give up all her wit to be called beautiful only once.

Poor "Prettiest"—she's pretty, sure enough, but her beauty is of the frail, girlish sort that will fade before she's twenty-five, and by the time she is thirty it will be hard, for even those who love her, to remember that she ever was called the prettiest anywhere.

And the one he loved best—Ah, if the love was sure to last and be true through weal or woe—that would be worth choosing, wouldn't it?

But somehow you never can tell. Love goes by faith and when it will, and neither one who loves nor wants to be loved can hold it a second longer.

The "Wittiest"—she's the lucky one, after all.

For, when the "Prettiest" is faded and love has flown, the wit and the humor of life will be there. And no one who can make a joke or even see one when some one else makes it can ever be very unhappy very long at a time.

I choose to be the "Wittiest"—don't you?

Red Cross and Blue Star

By MORTON BIRGE.

A SOLDIER dies—the patriot's price—
On Service Flag the tale is told,
Another Blue Star turns to Gold

And marks the final sacrifice.

The Red Cross turns to us for gold
To be transmuted into care
Of soldiers wounded "Over there."
A work of mercy manifold.

This truth the triple colors hold:
The more to Red Cross funds you give,
The more of wounded men shall live,
The less of Blue Stars turn to Gold.

ENTHUSIASM IS NEEDED FOR ALL TASKS

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

THERE is a loss from business failures in the United States every year of a sum which ranges between two and three hundred million dollars.

And, according to financial authority, the cause in almost every instance can be set down to inefficiency. Bradstreet figures that 80.3 per cent. of all failures are due to the personal shortcomings of those who failed, and place at the head of the list—far ahead of such faults as outside speculation, doubtful habits, personal extravagance or dishonesty—simple incompetence.

In other words, a large number of men and women who are honest, sober, industrious and economical go to the wall every year because they either don't or won't learn how. They are not on their jobs.

Those two or three hundred millions on the wrong side of the ledger form a pretty heavy indictment against our boasted national characteristics of shrewdness and adaptability. In England and on the Continent they have far fewer failures than we do in this country. And the reason, as one careful observer has pointed out, is because in those older countries business enterprises are seldom started without a fair degree of ability or preparation; often, indeed, they are handed down from father to son, staying in the same family for generations. Over here, we make it more a sporting proposition.

Waste of Energy

At the present time, too, when we are being advised from every billboard that "Dollars will win the war!" those staggering figures of loss mean more than a mere exposition of recklessness and slipshod methods. They represent the waste of an appalling amount of energy and effort which should be Hooverized and conserved by proper direction and application, and so made a national asset instead of a national menace.

Before seeking a remedy for any condition you have got to diagnose the trouble. Does the brand of incompetence laid upon these men and women who fail mean that they are lacking in brains or ability? Not at all. Does it mean that they are lazy or shiftless? Not necessarily; they may and often do work harder and for longer hours than their competitor who succeeds. Does it mean that they are negligent, extravagant, visionary or crooked? Again, no.

A man or woman today may fulfil to the last jot and tittle the law of business success as laid down in the good, old copybook maxims and still be a failure—a failure through incompetence.

Never a Chance

There was never in the world such a chance for the person starting out in business for himself as there is today; but equally there was never before such a heavy demand as business makes today upon the person who elects to follow it.

When Charles M. Schwab was recently called upon to take charge of the government's shipbuilding program he was asked upon what he would chiefly rely for the success of his campaign, and he said upon the infusion of a spirit of enthusiasm and rivalry into the work.

That's it! Mr. Schwab knows what he's talking about; he stands in the public mind as the representative type of modern American business man. And the spirit of rivalry and enthusiasm is what every business needs.

Let it be made a "sporting proposition," not in the sense of a gamble, a blind taking of chances, but in the sense of a contest for which one trains and fits himself, constantly studying every point of the game, and into which one throws his whole heart and soul. No man who does that will long remain incompetent or inefficient.

It matters not what a man's handicaps may be, nor how faulty his work or his methods according to set rules and traditions; if he has that white flame of enthusiasm burning in his bosom, he is bound to succeed.

You've got to love your job. You've got to root for it in season and out of season. You've got to make a hobby of it, and give it your undivided interest. If you can't do that, then the best thing you can do is to get out and shift to a line where you can.
